THE COURT STREET CASES.

Goods Shipped in Bond by the Way of Europe Can Come in Foreign Bottoms and Are Free of Daty.

San Francisco.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the suit of the government against Dunham, Carrigan, Hayden & Co. for the confiscation of a cargo of nails. Two years ago, when the Transcontinental Association of Railways, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the clipper ship combine kept up rates from New York to San Francisco, the firm of Dunham, Carrigan, Hayden & Co. discovered that it was cheaper to ship goods from New York to Europe and thence by sail to San Francisco than to ship by the combined railways or steamers direct to San Francisco. Acting on this discovery, they shipped a big lot of goods by a Belgian steamer to a consignee in Antwerp in bond. They were put aboard a forgian steamer to a consignee in Antwerp in bond. They were put aboard a foreign sailing vessel there and shipped to this city. After much of the shipment had been landed, Collector of the Port Phelps seized the first lot that followed. The lower court of the data Dunham, Carrigan, Hayden & Co. was lawfully entitled to ship as it had, and that such shipments did not violate the letter of coastwise laws, which require trade be-

Many of the property owners interested refused to pay until the case was heard in the lower court, owners interested relused to pay until the case was heard in the lower court, but as soon as the decision was learned a majority of the assessments were promptly paid, the opinion being pretty general that Judge McBride's ruling would hold good. Those who took the case to the higher court were only interested to the extent of a few hundred Lallars and in agreements the loss to the city will be small, as none of the property owners paid under protest. The grounds upon which the ruling of the Circuit Court was reversed have not yet been learned but it is surmised that e ordinances providing for the im provement of the street were illegal, by Mayor, the President of the Council having signed all measures passed after the resignation of Mayor Crosby in 1892 and until the election of Mr. Elmore by

NEW BOARD OF DIRECTORS. Annual Meeting of the Southern Pacific

San Francisco,-The annual stockholders' meeting of the Southern Pacific Railway Company has just been held, and a new Board of Directors elected as follows: C. P. Huntington, C. F. Crocker, T. H. Hubbard, Russell J. Wilson, S. T. Gage, N. T. Smith, W. H. Crocker, H. E. Huntington, T. E. Stillman, A. N. Towne and J. C. Stubbs. The new names H. Crocker, the latter replacing his brother George. The election of Russell J. Wilson and the re-election of S. T. Gage and N. T. Smith, all representatives of Stanford, seem to refute the recent an early withdrawal of her proprietary interest in the road. The annual report for 1893 was submitted, and made the following showing of totals: Receipts, $48,708,158: expenditures, $47,913,801: ments, $311,439; total net income, $1, ceipts, $49,665,900; expeditures, $49,balance, $308,612; income from

FUHRMAN ACQUITTED.

SEATTLE.-The trial of Henry Fuhrman, the rich broker, for using the city funds as an accessory to Adolph Krug, the defaulting City Treasurer, ended in a verdict for the defendant. The trial lasted five days, and was closely contested. The specific charge was concerning the $10,000 which Fuhrman was allowed by Krug to take. Krug was convicted on this same indictment a few days ago. Fuhrman's defense was that he took the money on deposit the same as the banks did. It was shown that he eturned every dollar borrowed and has made up the shortages of several other borrowers by putting up about three times his proportion of the defaulting Treasurer's official bond. Ex-United States Senator John B. Allen and E. C. Hughes conducted the defense, and made cloquent pleas for the defendant. The jury was out but little over an hour and returned a verdict of "not guilty. Several other prominent citizens were indicted on similar charges, and this acquittal is supposed to greatly relieve

HOW TO LAY OFF THE LAND.

Make a Careful Survey of the Field With the Eye Before Starting the Plow-Other Agricultural Excerpts.

Before starting the plow make a care-ful survey of the field with the eye and by pacing off the lands to see where the roper places for back furrows and dead furrows are to come. The proper place for the back furrow, if in an open field, is where the dead furrow of the year before was, so as to keep the field as near level as possible. Having selected the proper places for the back furrows, pace from each end of the field three less paces than one side of the land; then place the guide stake at one end and start the plow from the other, using care to drive the first furrow straight and parallel from the side of the field. Plow back and forth, throwing the furrows together, until you have a strip six paces wide plowed; then plow across the end of this back-furrowed strip at each round, using care to start the furrow across the end of this back-furrowed strip parallel with the end of the field and the furrows straight, so that the angles at the corners are right angles; then when you come to finish the land it will come out even on the side and end of the plowed land.

For the second land, having selected the place for the back furrow, pace from each end of the line nine less paces than the number of paces from the last furrow of the land last plowed, place the guide stake at one end of land and start the plow from the other, and plow as before until you have a strip six paces wide plowed, throwing the furrows together, and then plow across the end, as before the back furrows, pace from each end of fore until you have a strip six paces wide plowed, throwing the furrows together, and then plow across the end, as before, and so continue until there are but six paces remaining in the strip between the back furrows. Then plow back and forth on this strip, throwing the furrows alternately toward one back furrow and then the other, until completed, and so continue until the field is completed. The advantage of this method of laying off land over the ones in common use is that you have the field plowed without turning on and tramping down the plowed ground at each corner of the land, and that the dead furrow by ending at the end of the field carries the surface water completely past the plowed ground and thus gives a much better drainage than is done by plowing around a land and turning on the plowed ground and finishing the land a number of paces from the end of the field, so that there is no outlet for the water gathering in the dead furrows.

Another advantage of this method of laying off lands is this: Instead of pilling up a number of furrows of the soil weekdays and from seven to nine hours on Sundays, with one Sunday off in each month. Surely when so much is said about an eight hour day for men is more complete. The ashes of wood contain every element taken from the soil by plants of all kinds. While there is a difference between plants to some extent, there is a close resemblance between them in the a close resemblance between them in the quantity and kind of mineral matters they contain. These consist of potash, lime, phosphoric acid, slumina, magnesia, soda and silica chiefly. The most important of these are the first three, and the potash especially. The composition of ashes varies mostly in the proportion of lime and potash they contain, this being from a few per cent to 70 or more of the first and from 3 to 30 of the latter. The wood ashes known as Canada ashes in the market have an average of 6 per cent of potash and 30 of lime when unleached, and a little more lime and about 1 per cent of potash in the leached. The phosphoric acid is from 2 to 3 per cent in both kinds; the potash is the most soluble part of the ashes. As they have quite a large amount of lime, there is no necessity to mix lime with them for use as a fertilizer, but it is useful to add some phosphate and some kind of nitrogenous substance with them to make them a complete fertilizer. Thus a ton of ashes may have 200 pounds of fine ground bone or good superphosphate and 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or of dried blood and flesh fertilizer added for one scre. In the use of these fertilizers ilberality is the true economy.

feeding soft food to a brood of chickens until three weeks old is a mistake. Dry oatmeal, cracked wheat and Indian johnnycake with an egg in it are the best articles of food, and they should never be without a supply of clean water, taking care to arrange the pans so that the chickens cannot jump into them and get wet. A simple method of doing this is to use saucers with a common flower pot inverted in each, so as to leave a small circular space of water at the edge accessible to the bills of the chickes.

Precaution With Pigs.

Sometimes in spite of all precautions the sow will be found in the act of destroying her young. I have never had any trouble of this kind, but have known it to be prevented by moistening the pigs' backs with a cloth saturated with coal oil.

Lastly, if you would avoid scours, keep the sleeping rooms perfectly clean and dry, and give the dam no swill that is very sour.

The writer knows from many years of successful experience that, if these suggestions are faithfully followed, but few pigs will be lost. With present prices of hogs, compared with that of everything else, nothing will pay better for careful attention to details than raising pigs.
