Oregon Crop-Weather Report. Hop picking began in Donglas and Josephine counties on the 1st and in some sections of the Williametre valley on the 31. There are many favorable comments on the crop which is said to be unusually clean and free from tice. In Coles valley, Douglas county, the crop is exceptionally fine. Clackamas county is the section complaining of lice in the yards. The pormo crop has suffered much from the draught so that the yield will be light. The snowers were not beneficial to the potato crop; had they gome about ten days previous good results would have followed. The grain erep (with but lew exceptions) fell short of an average. The crop approached nearer an average in Washington and Yambill esunties than in other sections. At the North Dakota station, where onion culture has failed when attempted in the ordinary way, the "new culture" was attempted. Seeds were sown early in shallow boxes in the greenhouse, and in due time the young plants transplanted to the open ground. It was estimated that about 84 sonare feet of glass are necessary to furnish plants sufficient for one acre and that the cost of transplanting an acre is about $10. When the saving of seed is taken into account, it is doubtful if the expense of growing a crop in the old way is less than by the method of transplanting. Transplanting onions produced large, regular, mature bulbs, greatly excelling the others in keeping and market qualities. Agricultural News and Notes. The report of the statistician of the United States department of agriculture shows considerable reduction of the areas of wheat and oats in the United States and corresponding increase in the area of corn. The advocates of the deep trench system are able to prove that they can raise the largest, finest and best flavored celery in this way. On the other hand, it seems to be conceded that fairly good celery can be produced at a less cost when planted near the surface. It is a mistake to suppose that meadows do not need "building up." manure spreader should be used in geting the manure evenly distributed.

Honey and Beeswax. The census has revealed no material increase in the production of beeswax during the last 10 years, during which honey producet has gained nearly 150 per cent. This is explained by the more general use of the extractor, which greatly increases the product of honey per hive, while it discourages the build ing of comb. In 1879 but 12 states produced more than 1,000,000 pounds of honey each, while in 1890 there were 20 that produced more than that quantity-Iowa producing nearly 7,000,000, Illinois, Missouri and New York over 4,000,000, Texas, Wisconsin and California over 3,000,000 pounds. The United States imports no honey or beeswax, but in the nine months ended March 31, 1894, exported honey to the value of $117,571, or 10 times as much as was shipped abroad in the like period of the previous year.
