THE EXTRAORDINARY BOND ISSUE.

The more President Cleveland's manipulation of the new bond issue is examined the more scandalously outrageous it appears. Even Wall Street is revolted by the president's cynical sacrifice of the national interests.

FROG POND.

The weather has been very pleasant for the past week. John Tyler has taken advantage of the good weather for us to understand he has finished the contract of grubbing for the L. Turner. The Peters brothers are almost rustling around grubbing.

PARK PLACE.

Mrs. Frost of Canby spent a few days with relatives at this place. The joint debate, between the leading camp and Park Place debating societies, was a complete success.

Longfellow Symposium.

Following is the program of the Longfellow Symposium to be given at the Congregational church on Friday evening, March 1st.

COLFON.

The weather is warm and rainy. There is considerable sickness in the neighborhood. Miss Grace Gorbett is confined to her bed with the scarlet fever.

FORE: Geneva University.

Dr. B. K. Pearson of Chicago has donated $30,000 to Pacific University on condition that $100,000 in railway stock be placed in the hands of the trustees.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Now that the Oregon legislature is in session everybody will want to read a newspaper printed at Salem, the capital. They will want a paper that gives all the news.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Brownell's bill for the appointment of bank examiner carries no appropriation but levies a tax on each bank to pay the salary and expenses of that officer.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Woodard's bill to protect native song birds in the state provides for the same. The bill providing for the location and relocation of county seats, introduced by Gowen, passed the senate.

This bill provides that whenever a majority of the voters of any county in the state shall, by petition, ask that the question of relocation of county seat be submitted to a vote of the county, the county court shall then fix a date for each election. This matter of county seat fights has been a constant source of annoyance to Oregon's legislators, and this bill becomes a law will relieve such matters to be settled in the county where they exist.

The most spirited debate the senate has indulged in this session occurred Friday last on the question of a constitutional convention. Long and urbane addresses were made by McGinn, Brownell, Huston and Cogswell. Speeches of force and interest were also made by Denny, Vandenberg, Alley, Smith of Clatsop, and Barler. The burden of McGinn's argument was that this is not a time for a constitutional convention. The force and interest of his would be much more threatened by such a move. He also called upon the republican members to stand together.

He feared the dangers which would ensue if popular theories were engrafted upon a constitution now, a time when the people are in a large crowd in the lobby. Senator Brownell, who followed him, was listened to with close attention and the crowd of listeners increased during his progress, and his remarks. He said he disliked to oppose a member of his own party, but there were times when partisanship should be set aside and the welfare of the people given attention. He believed that the constitution was adopted when slavery was in existence and long before the war and was not a constitution that the people of Oregon should now live under. He pointed out several of the antiquated and unreasonable provisions of the present constitution, which he said, were proposed by the framers as a concession of enlightenment. The republican leaders who have been living off of the sap of the offices of the state for 30 years or more are opposed to a constitutional convention. He said that the republican leaders who have been living off of the sap of the offices of the state for 30 years or more are opposed to a constitutional convention.

He was opposed to the republicans of Portland controlling the political affairs of the state any longer. The capitalists were opposed to a new constitution; capital always gets scared when new measures and methods of government are proposed. Brownell's remarks, though terse and eloquent and in line with the sentiment of the great masses of people. In closing, Brownell said in effect that the new ideas, new blood and activity were necessary in this advanced age of civilization and progress. The bill was lost by a vote of 15 to 14.
