Mrs. Dye's Lecture.—The membership of the Chautauque circles of this place attended Mrs. C. H. Dye's address on the Hudson Bay Company before the Historical Society of Portland on Monday evening. The Oregonian, in speaking of the lecture, says among other comments: "Much of the unwritten history of early pioneer life in Oregon was disclosed to the Historical Society in narrative form by Mrs. C. H. Dye, of Oregon City, at the First Congregational church Monday evening. The lecture room of the church was completely filled with members and patrons of the society, when Judge Hurley, as presiding officer, formally opened the meeting and introduced Mrs. Dye as the historian of the evening. Mrs. Dye's treatment of the subject was at once delightfully interesting and instructive. Long residence on some of the historical grounds in Oregon and Washington, intimate acquaintance with a very large number of the oldest pioneers, pains-taking research into the most minute data to be secured, and much careful study of the subject in general, have fully equipped this accomplished lady to become a teacher. She has in her possession a wonderful store of facts and illustrative anecdotes, supported by corroborative evidence that cannot be impeached, the whole forming the groundwork for a historical work that almost surpasses in point of interest the most thrilling romances of the day. And she has woven the whole into a historical narrative which, from a literary point of view, is full of merit. As a lecturer, Mrs. Dye displayed in a marked degree the talent of fixing the attention of her audience, and making it feel the intensity of her own feeling."
