DOES IT MEAN "DOLLAR WHEAT"?

The latest advices from Australia indicate that instead of exporting wheat to England the Australasian colonies will have to import a very considerable amount this year to make good their own shortage.

In what seems to have been a year of average productiveness Victoria harvested a little over ten bushels per acre from 3,000,000 acres in wheat, exporting that year breadstuffs to the value of $5,300,000.

In the same year that South Australia exported 181,861 tons of breadstuffs, chiefly wheat. Its wheat exports range from $3,500,000 to $6,500,000 a year.

In the same year that England bought 24,658,000 hundredweight of wheat from the United States she took 3,877,000 hundredweight from her Australasian colonies and 13,272,000 from the Argentine republic.

If it turns out that both the Australasian and the Argentine crops are heavily short the effect will be marked, as they furnish England about 25 per cent. of her foreign wheat.

This estimate does not take flour imports into consideration, and while nearly all of the flour used in England comes from America, we are not so completely masters of the British market in an average year but that we are likely to be benefited by heavy shortages among our minor competitors.

The Clackamas county republican convention passed the following resolutions: "Resolved, That we will not vote for any one for the office of representative unless he will pledge himself against the appropriation of any money for normal or other schools (the public excepted), as we believe it is not right to tax the poor to educate the children of the rich."

"Such resolution belong properly to populist conventions. Oregon cannot do too much for her schools, and a first class university as well as high grade normal schools efficiently but not extravagantly maintained should be resolutely against by populists, not republican conventions."

An exchange thinks the motto on our silver dollar, "In God We Trust," should have an "I" in the second word.

The Salem Journal says: "If you ain't happy in the republican party and don't want to join the populist or democrats you can go to Alaska."

It hasn't been six months since the republicans carried this state, and the people are ready sick of the whole mob. Louisville (Ky.) Courier Journal.

The Clackamas county democrats are sounder on the money question than those of Portland. The Multnomah county convention was so nearly equally divided that no declaration was possible on this, the most important question before the people.—Oregonian.

The democratic party of this state will now rapidly re-absorb the populist party. They have taken Pennoyer back into the fold. But the question of money standards is sitting parties as wheat. It will not much longer be possible for men to maintain unnatural party relations in the face of these conditions.—Clatskanie Chief (rep.)

Mr. Carlisle is more interested in the platform which the democratic party shall adopt than he is in the nomination it shall make, and he would not think of accepting the nomination unless the platform should be satisfactory. By the way, has anybody heard of a single republican candidate who is making any conditions on the subject of platform?

HERMANN, "the healer," is considered a fake by the Portland people, especially those that have been "bitten." He possesses considerable magnetic power and a patient feels much better immediately after receiving "treatment" but is not cured and in a day or so is as bad as ever. As long as he can get the morning journal to boom him (at 50 cents a line) he will continue to make money.

The Portland banks have so much silver on hand that they don't like to receive same except for deposit by regular customers, and are willing to prepay express on all you want. The government pays $4 per $1000 express on silver from San Francisco mint to banks in Oregon, but if you want gold you are required to pay the express yourself. Why this difference? Some of the people still think we have not enough money in the country.

An Open Letter to the Editor of the Industrial Herald.

Oregon City, Or., Apr. 20th 1896. With an apology to those who do not believe it and for the enlightenment of those who think what a newspaper prints is true:

When you say that I have any trade made or in contemplation with any political party or party managers or candidates for office, either republican or populist, you lie from the tip of your slanderous tongue to the bottom of your anarchistic soul.

Signed, W. E. CARLL.

Bids Wanted.

Plans and specifications may be seen at residence of district clerk in Sunset City. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. J. MARTIN, Chairman. L. D. TAYLOR, Clerk.

We think we are safe in asserting that more "I. W. HARPER" whiskey is sold than any other whiskey made in Kentucky. It is a whiskey for the sick room and leading physicians prescribe it unhesitatingly. If you are in need of a pure stimulant, order a bottle on our recommendation. We offer this advice largely in your interest. It will enable you to secure Pure Old Whiskey and protect you from being imposed upon. Sold by Hill & Cole, Oregon City, Ore.

CAMPAIGN OF MONEY.

SOUTHERN DELEGATES BOUGHT LIKE CATTLE.

The Mask of Decency No Longer Veils the Corrupt Methods of Republican Politicians in the South—Longest Party Captures the Most Votes.

The experience which the Republican party is now having in its conventions in the several southern states to choose delegates to St. Louis ought to come, and would come to a party led by different men than the Elkinses and Olaytons and Platts and Quays, with all the force of a demonstration requiring a change in the system of representation in national conventions. Everybody knows, and these gatherings at the south make it patent, that the southern delegates are to be acquired by those candidates who have most money to spend in getting control of their states. They represent nothing.

The Republican party there is only a name, and not a fragment one. It cannot carry a state, elect a candidate or choose a member of the electoral college. The men whom it sends to national conventions simply make them, as a rule, an opportunity to turn their political pretensions to personal profit. Every four years there is a perfect carnival of corruption throughout the south in order to obtain the large and sometimes decisive vote of those states in the convention for some particular candidate. It was one of the most serious drawbacks to the Republican campaign of four years ago that Mr. Harrison's strength in the convention lay so largely among the southern delegates, who could contribute nothing to his election.

This year the buying and selling process is going on with more than usual eagerness and less than the ordinary attempt at concealment. With the rise to undisputed control in the party's councils of its most venal and least scrupulous element, the mask of decency that has veiled its operations in previous years has fallen off. The different candidates have massed their resources and are going through the southern states as stock buyers might traverse the cattle ranches of the west. The man with the long purse captures most of the delegates, and it is not difficult to see where the funds come from. While the moral sense of the Republican party of the nation has fallen almost to the point of disappearance, we cannot think that this process will pass without its proper rebuke by the voters. It constitutes an element of weakness which will make itself felt later on.

There is no possible reason for the continuance of a system of representation which is based upon population instead of upon party vote. The strength of the southern states in the Republican conventions is out of all proportion to the number of votes that they will cast for the party's candidate. The system of representation in national conventions is an anomaly and a survival of an era which are pretty evenly balanced between the two parties, but in cases like this, where one party or the other is helpless and permanently in the minority, it opens the way to the dominance of improper influences. Among the forces which are at work today to degrade the Republican party in the eyes of the honest people of this country is the unceasing campaign of moneyed interests for control of the party convention by capturing the delegates from the south.—St. Paul Globe.

M'KINLEY AND QUAY.

Probable and Logical Candidates of the Republican Party.

Major McKinley has secured the Exposition building for headquarters during the national convention, says the St. Louis Republic.

For the favorite sons a back room on the top floor in any of the St. Louis hotels will be ample. Several of them are not certain at this time of needing headquarters at all.

If they discover later that it is wise to maintain private consultation rooms, three or four of them can club together. Callum and Manderson and Bradley, by hearty co-operation, might bring enough delegates together to remind the news paper men that they were once considered in the fight.

But even this is not certain. It will largely depend on whether McKinley makes an aggressive fight in Illinois, Nebraska and Kentucky.

The Republic's Republican ticket is gaining ground every day. McKinley and Quay are the logical Republican candidates.

A Lesson to the Bosses.

If no unforeseen or unexpected circumstances occurs, there will be absolutely no possibility of preventing McKinley's nomination. Such an event would be a signal lesson to the bosses, and teach them to take their orders from the people instead of attempting to control the whole business.—Utica Press (Rep.).

The "Kitty" Keeper.

Hon. Mark Hanna, the royal "kitty" keeper of the McKinley boom, has managed to train down to one newspaper interviewer per day. The other booms might manage to make some headway if they only had a Hanna in stock.—Washington Post.

Brotherly Advice Needed.

If Pennsylvania's favorite son would only give Illinois' favorite son an occasional suggestion on the political necessity for giving his mouth and pen a rest, the senatorial combine would have more presidential strength.—St. Louis Republic.

Both Are Protectionists.

Mr. Morton has placed a keg in Indiana, the manufacturers will be their themselves for McKinley. But why should they? Morton would sign a McKinley bill as readily as McKinley himself.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

EQUIVOCATION WON'T GO.

Juggling of Words on the Money Question Will Not Suffice.

Mr. McKinley has made a mistake. He is undoubtedly "the favorite" in the race for the Republican presidential nomination, but the race is not yet won, and still less is it decided what the result at the polls next November is to be. The money question is one of the utmost consequences just now. The people at last understand it. They are divided into two bodies. One has presented as its ultimatum to political parties that they shall declare unequivocally for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 without awaiting agreement with any other country. The other with equal insistence demands that they shall declare themselves unflinchingly opposed to this free silver policy.

The time has passed when either side is to be deceived or satisfied with any juggle of words, however ingenious. Yet Mr. McKinley has had his Ohio convention frame and adopt a resolution on this subject which means nothing except that he would like the support of men on both sides without pledging himself to anything on either side. It is not likely that any such policy will meet acceptance either at St. Louis or in the election. Mr. McKinley is likely to be nominated because he stands for protection, but it will be upon a much more pronounced platform than that which he has framed or else his nomination will invite revolt and bolting.

The issue is simple enough. The people on both sides of this question are asking parties and candidates the categorical question, Are you or are you not in favor of free and unlimited silver coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1 and without waiting for international agreement? No attempt to answer this question with equivocations is likely to satisfy the men on either side of the controversy. We have passed beyond that stage.—New York World.

THE CHIEF OBSTRUCTION.

A Protective Tariff Enhances Cost of Commodities and Hampers Commerce.

A tariff spoliation organ, observes the Philadelphia Record, sententionally remarks: "The world's supply of useful products is now, and it always has been, insufficient for the needs of men. But men who have desired the things produced by the movement from producer to consumer." Just so. Of all the obstructions produced by misgovernment the worst has been a protective tariff in enhancing the cost of commodities and restraining the exchanges of commerce. Our tariff philosopher goes on to say: "Thus there seems to be a surplus production, but in truth there is nothing else than partial paralysis of the business of making exchanges." Why, then, in the name of common sense, increase this paralysis by raising high tariff obstructions to prevent American manufacturers from obtaining cheap and abundant raw materials of production? In consequence of the repeal of the wool duties the woolen manufacturers of the United States produced in 1895 purer, better and cheaper fabrics, and in far greater quantities, than in any former year in the country's history. The inevitable effect of a restoration of the wool duties would be to again obstruct the movement from producer to consumer and increase the paralysis of the business of exchanges. Happily, this danger is past for a time, and let us hope, forever!"

No Time For Experiments.

The Chicago Tribune, which insists upon tariff reductions at odd times when it does not urge a prohibitive tariff, complains because McKinley has the support of all Republicans "who believe it is impossible to get too much of a good thing." "These McKinley Republicans," says the Tribune, "include all those members of the Republican party who believe that a tariff which creates and fosters trusts is a good thing."

If all these Republicans are conceded to McKinley, the favorite sons would as well withdraw. The radical protectionists who foster trusts under the name of infant industries comprise nine-tenths of the Republican politicians. They may believe Reed or Allison is for trust building protection, but they know beyond all disputing how McKinley stands. And this is not a year to try experiments.—St. Louis Republic.

Candidate of Monopoly.

The indications are that the Republican convention will find itself dominated by the same interests which controlled the convention of 1888. McKinley is the logical candidate of the monopolists, and they have the money to put out for delegates.—Lewiston Sun.

More Humorous Than Prophetic.

Channey Dewey says Governor Morton will win and secure the presidential nomination. Channey has never shown himself a success as a prophet, but he is a good humorist. The above remark of his sounds more humorous than prophetic.—Boston Globe.

Slightly Mixed.

"The Republican party is a queer trinity just at present," the Boston Herald says. "One part wants free silver and free trade; another, protection and free silver, and a third, sound money and protection. A rather refractory three horse hitch."

Used to the Jolt.

"From Lincoln to Quay. What a fall for a great party!" says the Knoxville Sentinel. But the party has fallen so many times since Lincoln's day that this last one will not jar it much.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Trouble With Foraker.

"Mr. McKinley," declares Mr. Foraker, "has always lived in our midst." This will give the general public an idea of just what ails Foraker.—Washington Post.

DEATH TO FRUIT PESTS.

To make the Orchard pay you must spray, winter and summer with Prof. Brown's Exterminator. The only insecticide known that will kill all insects without injury to tree, fruit or foliage. Endorsed by the State Board of Horticulture of California, Oregon and Washington. Used by many Nurserymen and Orchardists. My winter wash is the only solution that will kill woolly Aphis, (used only when the foliage is off). My summer wash is a pure destroyer of the codling moth eggs, and all insects except woolly Aphis, use just after the blossoms fall off; my hop louse wash kills all insects that infest vines, vegetables and plants. The ingredients used in my formulas can be found in any drug store, costs much less than other washes. (Full and explicit directions for mixing and using.) Knowing I have a sure remedy, some unprincipled parties are now selling imitations. Therefore, to discourage all such parties I have concluded for a short time only to reduce the price of the three formulas to $2.50 by mail to any address. Formulas copyrighted January 14th, 1890.
