TARIFF ON WOOLENS.

The Duty Still Too High, Even From a Republican Standpoin

The protectionists have made a great howl over the bad condition of the wool manufacturers under the Wilson act, though many of the latter do not join in the outcry. It is quite true that our imports of woolen goods in the year 1895 increased largely as compared with 1894. The figures for the two years were gleefully compared to show the rainous tendencies of the new tariff, although the immense imports of raw wool by the American manufacturers indicated clearly enough that they were not idle. As we have heretofore shown, 1894 was a year of enforced economy and business depression, to such an extent that the market became bare of goods. When business improved, both the importers and domestic manufacturers had an extraordinary demand to supply.

While this extraordinary demand lasted the protectionists eagerly quoted evin Minthorn addition to the city of ery statement in an English paper which pointed to business prosperity. They wagged their heads and said, "See how your tariff makes the British prosperous!" Recently, however, there has too high as this court has no jurisdiction been a change. The extraordinary demand appears to have been satisfied, and the parading of extracts from English papers has become a decaying industry. News from Bradford, the great English woolen manufacturing city, is to the effect that many American orders given last year have recently been canceled. The reason for this is thus explained in a letter from Bradford to The American half a dozen Bradford shippers, and it is their united testimony that American factories, Washington mills and one or two others are turning out fabrics at present a shade cheaper than can Bradping charges and duty are paid. American manufacturers are placing on the New York market clay worsteds at some 2 to 216 cents cheaper than can Bradford, quality, style and get up being fully equal to Bradford makes. This shows that the tariff on woolens instead of being too low, is higher than was demanded by the Republican platform of 1892. That platform demanded a tariff on competitive articles equal to the difference of wages at home and abroad. That the difference is greater than this is proved by the ability of the American manufacturers of woolens to undersell the importers. Gorman and his associates in the senate gave the manufacturers more than they asked for, and yet they call the present law a free trade tariff. The duties on woolens are too high, even from a Republican standpoint.-Louisville Courier-Jour-

The legislation for which he is chiefly noted-the McKinley bill-was repudiated by the American people with as much emphasis as any legislation of recent years. In fact, many prominent protectionists think the bill was bunglingly and injudiciously drawn up.

As governor of Ohio McKinley did not add to his reputation. In fact, many people of Ohio do not hesitate to say among themselves that in executive qualities their late governor showed himself deficient. He plainly did not make a great governor of Ohio. No campaign of shouting at Columbus and fat frying later on can make a

BRUIN AND THE BOAT as the boat went toward the bear, to get

THE DEER STORY MAN SIGHED, BUT SAID NOT A WORD. A Story of a Bear and a Hunter In a Canoe With No Weapon Except His Wits. It Was a Naval Battle Royal, and Brains Won a Magnificent Victory. They had been telling all hunting stories, some almost too miraculous to be believed, except by hunters who had had experiences and knew what strage things sometimes occur far away amid the forest wilds when there are no witnesses. The last man bad told of deer hunting in the water, and a squat, heavy set man sitting in the corner seemed particularly interested in the tale.

"That reminds me," he said, when he had a chance to come in, "of an experience I once had up in the lake region of Canada. A party of us were in camp there, along in the fall, and were having great sport with the rod and the game and fish for which the section was noted except a bear, and of that tracks had been reported not far from camp, and we were to try for bruin as soon as we had made proper preparations. The day before we were to start out on the bear hunt I had gone off up the shore of the lake in a light cance we had to fish for a couple of hours and get a fry for supper. I had nothing with me in the cance except my fishing outfit and no sort of a weapon unless the cance paddle might be called one. But a man didn't need a weapon to eatch fish with, so I gave no thought to it. I had found a nice cave up the cove about a mile from camp, and there l stopped the cance about 50 feet from shore in deep water and threw out my line. Luck was good, and I had pulled in five or six fine fellows and was having more fun than anybody, except the fisherman, when I was startled by a splash from the thicket lining the shore, and the next minute a whopping big bear was making for me lickety split. To say that I was scared doesn't half express it. I was paralyzed. I didn't even have sense enough left to grab my paddle and try to get away. I simply caught it up and held it in my hand as I would a club and waited. But the bear didn't wait. He was very evidently hungry, or he never would have attacked me out there in the boat, and he was coming straight for me. I waited for him to get close enough to bat him one, and then I gave it to him with the cance paddle square between the eyes. It dazed him a little, but it was far more disastrous to the paddle, and when I straightened up from delivering the blow I had only about two feet of the paddle left in my hand. The rest of it, splintered, was floating in the wake of the bear. He gave himself a shake after I hit him, and the next minute he had cannels the side of the cance with one of his big paws and was manifesting a violent desire to get aboard with me. As he weighed about 400 pounds and was as powerful as a horse it did not require a very strong haul to settle that with him. "By this time a portion of my wits had returned, and I had sense enough, part of the proceeding early, and instead of his coming aboard with me the cance was upset, and I went into the water the bear and me. I was a good swimmer and had a faint idea if I got headed toward the shore I could outswim my enemy and get away, so I turned, as soon as I got straightened out in the lake, and put back the other way. The bear in the meantime had started around the end of the boat, coming my way. I don't know what it was, whether inspiration or fear or bravery, but certainly it was something out of the ordinary, for as I went around one end of the bost and the bear was at the other or quite near it I was struck with an idea, and instead of trying speed with the bear for the shore I concluded to try wits with him right where we were. So I swung on to the end of the canoe, which was bottom side up, and as the bear came toward me, I tilted the other end up, and with a sudden jerk, dropped the inverted boat over the bear's head. The next minute I was on top of the boat with the bear under me. I guess he didn't know what had happened to him, for he didn't seem to do anything gun. We had secured specimens of all under there except to bump his head against the bottom and growl. I thought at first he might have sense enough to dive and come out on the other side; but, like turkeys that walk into a pen through a hole heading from the outside into it, and, never once looking down for the hole to get out at, run around in a crazy kind of a way till they are caught, that bear staid under the boat with me on top of it, bumping his head and growling. By this time I was feeling a good deal like Napoleon crossing the Alps, or like some other great hero, and felt still more like it as I noticed the bumping and the growling growing less every minute until finally they ceased altogether. I didn't understand that quite and began to wonder if the bear wasn't catching on to himself and thinking of the easiest way to get at his dinner, when over in the clear water of the lake, a dozen feet or so from the boat, I saw something big and dark slowly going toward the bottom and drifting away. Another look convinced me it was my bear, and another minute found me swimming for the shore at 40 miles an hour, more or less. Half an hour later I was on the spot again with three men in a big canoe, and still half an hour later found us on shore with the body of the bear, which we had recovered from the water. It was a clear
