"I was completely run down, My nerves
became so unstrung through loss of sleep and worry that I felt sure I would be compelled to give up my position I would lie awake all night long, and it took but little to shake me up so that I could not possibly attend to my business as I should. In connection with this I had here trouble, heaviness about the stomach, and pains in different parts of my body. I was also much reduced in flesh. I was persuaded to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

I first procured a trial bottle from a local druggistand good results quickly followed. I then procured a dollar bottle, and by the time I had used this up I was a different man. I am now on my third bottle and am able to sleep soundly and eat regularly, something I could not possibly do before taking your Nervine. I am now fully recovered, and do not besitate to pronounce Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the greatest nervine on earth."

The Bankers' Nonpartisan Platform.

Maintenance of the existing gold standard of values was vigorously urged by the executive council of the American Bankers' association. The council opened its annual convention in the rooms of the chamber of commerce at 10 a. m., with Joseph C. Hendrix, president of the National Union bank of this city, in the chair. Over 30 members were present from every section of the country.

The morning session was devoted to a discussion of protective and free trade policies. During the afternoon session the following monetary platform was unanimously adopted by the council:

The executive council of the American Bankers' association declare unequivocally in favor of the maintenance of the existing gold standard of values and recommend to all bankers and to the customers of all banks the exercise of all of their influence as citizens of the United States to select delegates to the political conventions of both great parties who will declare unequivocally in favor of the maintenance of the existing gold standard of value. - New York

But I do not care to conceal the fact that I have no little faith in the method of obtaining a stand of grass in this way. In fact, is it not possible that this will yet come to be a common and favorite method of getting a stand of grass on the average soil of the prairie? At any rate, I will not hesitate to recommend farmers to try this mode of obtaining a stand of grass, however ridiculous it may appear to a farmer in the east." Here follow three letters from Minnesota farmers who have gained successful results by this method. The writ-

"I was in no way surprised at these results. In fact, I expected them after having gained some knowledge of prairie soils. There are good reasons for expecting such results. When grass seed fails on the prairie, it is not through any natural poverty of land, but because of lack of moisture. The seed invaria-Let the people bear these facts in bly starts, but later in the season it often season follows, there is a rapid escape of moisture through evaporation. That is one reason why fall plowed land in the west is much better qualified for a catch of grass seeds on prairie soils than spring plowed land. Again, when a nurse crop matures where grass seeds have been sown, it robs these of moisture; hence as soon as the nurse crop is cut and they are exposed to the glare of the hot sun they die. Now, when a nurse crop is sown thinly and grasses are sown at the same time, and live stock are turned on to graze when a good vigorous start has been made, the treading of the soil lessens evaporation and so increases the moisture of the soil. The growth is eaten off : hence the drain on moisture is lessened. The sunlight is let in, and this tends to increase the vigor of the plants. Of course we can well imagine that there should be some discretion used as to the extent and continuity of

If it should turn out that it is found worthy of pretty general adoption, it would mean a great deal. It would mean that pasture could be provided on short notice when wanted. It would mean that weeds would share the fate of the nurse crop-they would be eaten down. And it would mean that in getting a stand of grass there would be no loss of a crop in trying to secure it."
