POOR FARM.

The Salem Statesman says: "Clackamas county is about to buy a farm on which to keep its dependent poor. It is figured by the promoters of the scheme that it will make a saving over the present system, partly because many who receive support direct from the treasury in monthly installments would not go onto the farm, on account of their pride. A poorly managed farm might be more of a burden than a help from be more of a burden than a help from an economical standpoint. The question of support and help for the poor is always a very delicate one. There are chances for abuse of the right to ask for assistance from the public funds on the Plantum's, assistance from the public funds on the one side side, and of inhumanity in dealing in a general way with the various cases of want on the other. In Multnomah county the matter is left largely to the discretion of the judge. The tales of woe listened to by Judge Northup of FASHIONABLE foolery has reached its climax in Paris, where there was a swell dog wedding last week. The dogs belonging to a couple of titled people were united in wedlock with all the usual accessories of a wedding; orange blossoms, a veil and satin gown were worn by the poodle bride, while the dog groom had on a dress coat and bountonnier. There were a number of canine bridesmaids, a pure blood, bolls, pimples, etc., for five bulldog for a minister, and several ushers. The tales of woe listened to by Judge Northup of Multnomah and Terrell of Marion are many of them, indeed pitiful, and these officials have a grave and troublesome responsibility, in sifting the sincere and deserving from the professional dead beats. The poor we always have with us, and also the lazy and the criminal. The dividing line between the lazy and the criminal is often a very indistint one. The statesman has before this advocated the purchase of a farm for the poor of Marion county. But we are free to admit that there are two sides to this question, in fact, many sides."

MR. BRYAN.

Utterly mistaken, impracticable, and even pernicious as Mr. Bryan's ideas on the money question are, he is unquestionably a very popular man among the masses, who do not delve deeply into such matters, and who are ready to support any sort of a scheme that promises a radical change. A large, and the most intelligent and conservative portion, of the democratic party, as hitherto constituted, will not support him or his policy, but it seems reasonably certain that he will again be the candidate of the silver wing of the democratic party.
