SILVER SERVICE PRESENTATION—A number of the employes of the Crown Paper Mills Company, called at the residence of Noble Heath Wednesday and presented her and Mrs. Heath with an elegant silver service. The set is beautifully engraved, and the platter bears a complimentary inscription from the donors, and the other pieces are ornamented with an initial letter "H." After a social time interspersed with music, A. Williamson, of Portland, stated that they desired to present Mr. Heath a token of their esteem, whereupon Chas. A. Fitch made the presentation speech, to which the former most happily responded. This was accompanied by a testimonial of respect, signed by the employes of the Crown paper mills, which read as follows: "Whereas, our well respected fellow workman, Noble Heath, has severed his connection with the Crown Paper Company, where for several years it has been the pleasure of the undersigned to be associated with him in his capacity of assistant superintendent, therefore, be it Resolved, That it is with regret we view his departure from us and that the many acts of kindness and courtesy he has displayed toward us all, during the years of our association has endeared him to us. Resolved, That as a silent token of our respect and appreciation of his kindness, that we subscribe our names to this testimonial, and present the same to him with our best wishes for a successful future wherever he may be. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Heath, who also favored the guests with several vocal and instrumental selections on the piano.

Christmas is coming and every one of us likes to get a little present whether of value to us or not, but if we are the giver it lays decidedly in our hands to stretch our little expenditure for some dear one as far as possible in the region of usefulness. Take for instance toys—they are for a day—and your gift is forgotten. But if you buy a rocking chair of Bellomy & Busch it is a present for all time; by a little extra care it may be serviceable for their children's children.
