

RING OUT, YE BELLS!

Ring out, ring out, ye merry bells,
And let the deep mouthed cannon roar!
Each patriotic bosom swells!
The glorious Fourth is here once more!
When night descends what joys are his!
The blinding rocket cleaves the skies.
Hark! Hear the roman candles flash!
Behold the red and blue lights rise!
Now, whiz! z-z-zip! bang! torpedoes crash
And split the fretted ear of night.
Firecrackers jump, toy pistols flash,
"Mid exclamations of delight,
Now light the barrels smeared with tar,
Slow matches pass from hand to hand,
And salve and sticking plaster are
At druggists' stores in great demand.

FIRST VOLUNTEER FROM COMPTON.

NETTIE—full account of "another great victory over the Spaniards!" News traveled quickly from Chicago to Compton—quiet little country village on a short-cut railroad branch as it was.

The most exciting yet of exciting, rumor-haunted, war-bubbling June had come down on the noon train, in the shape of extra editions with glaring headlines announcing "our boys" at it, hot and heavy, along the coast of Cuba!

"Gettin' warm, I tell you!" commented old Si Slocum, his veteran eye glowing as it had not done since the sixties, when he took a glorious part at Antietam.

"Mean real, genuine business at last, I guess!" nodded his "war partner," Seth Paine, who had left one arm on that same honored battlefield.

"Yes, and we must just whoop 'er up this Fourth!" suggested young Abel Evans.

He was superintending the unloading of a box of fishing and hunting traps from the express car, but he took time to glance over the outspread paper the two old men had bought.

Si Slocum looked up with a dry "hum!" Seth mumbled something about "Spose so?"

Then, as young Evans lit his cigar and lazily ordered the box put in his trap, and sauntered toward it as if life was a regular play-day, Cuba a dim myth, the forces struggling there story-book unrealities, old Si dropped his hand on his knee with a slap that resounded like a pistol snap.

"Drat 'im, says I!" "Makes my blood bile!" asserted Seth, who, from sharing his comrade's bed and board and hardships so long, had come to almost share his thoughts.

"Fourth of July!" "As et a little powder and cheap bunting—and it'll be cheap that he buys—would count for rale old prime, choice patriotism!"

"In such a time as this!" "Humph!"

"Bah!" Adrian Morse, checking off freight received, lingered to listen half-amusedly to this animated colloquy.

He was interested in Abel Evans because Abel seconded his opinion in a certain vital regard—that there was only one girl in Compton worth looking at—pretty, winsome Nettie Slocum, the old veteran's granddaughter.

"Just come into all his father's money," said Si, "and when the relief corps went up to his place for a contribution, did he shell out? A dollar. Joshua Ann! I give two, and that's a quarter of my pension. Fourth of July—whoo! 'er up! Him? Abel Evans! Huh! Must have run across a job lot of powder somewhere! If I was in his shoes, I'd show my patriotism in a real way, I would. Drat my stiff leg!"

"And my one arm," murmured sympathetic Seth. "They wouldn't take me, now!"

Young Morse read the drift of the snappy conversation, and it set him thinking.

First, because Mr. Slocum was pretty Nettie's relative, next because, happening around at pretty Nettie's house that evening, pretty Nettie voiced some sentiments as to the duty of able-bodied Comptonians that sounded as if she had inherited some of the patriotic fire of her enthusiastic old grandfathers.

She had two suitor callers, as she usually had, that night—and Abel Evans shifted uneasily under her wish that she was a young man, with the President's offer open to come and be a hero!

He went home pooh-poohing the idea of rushing into yellow fever, "when the country could hire lots of poor recruits to do it," and calculated he would dazzle pretty Nettie on the Fourth of July with a "patriotic" demonstration that would make her admire a real home hero.

As to Adrian—Nettie's word was law. He heard, and he understood.

So, while his rival was trimming up the home lawn for a big Fourth of July "blowout," Adrian was quietly, perseveringly making his arrangements to do his duty, hoping, linked to it, would be his lady love's distinctive approbation.

On June 30 Adrian resigned his position with the railroad company.

July 1, 2, 3 he was not seen in Compton.

Pretty Nettie wondered, and grew serious.

Abel Evans went on with his "blowout" preparations, believing that his superior wealth, good looks and patriotism had driven a dangerous rival from the field.

UNCLE SAM TOUCHES OFF A FEW ROCKETS.

a sense of his vast importance that he wore his flag badge on one coat lapel as if it was a G. A. R. special honor ribbon.

Nettie was there—there were too many friendly acquaintances present not to attract her. Still, she missed a familiar face, and looked constantly and anxiously for it.

There were refreshments and speeches. Abel Evans attempted a bewildering oration on "Home Duty as a Patriot," and growing old Si Slocum spelled it with a little p.

Then the urchins had their fun—loading and firing a great brass cannon Evans had bought for the occasion, the boom of which beat anything ever heard in Compton before.

"Grandfather," asked Nettie's young brother, of old Si, "I suppose a dozen of those enormous cannon could just blow the Spaniards clean out of the water?"

"Then popguns!" snorted Seth derisively. "Do they have bigger?"

"Bigger! Why, that's a more musket to the monsters they use down along Santiago and sech."

"You don't say so! How I would like to see a real gun that was going to knock out the Spanish in Cuba!"

"Rifles! help, if I had two arms!" growled old Seth, deep down in his throat. "Here's one that may," insinuated an unobtrusive voice.

"I swear!" "Riflemante!" "Going to Cuba?" "Hurrh!"

It was Adrian Morse, and he carried a "real" gun, that was going to shoot real "Spaniards!"

He looked pretty proud at the fiery, ardent commendation of old Seth and Si over his showing the true mettle.

He blushed like a pony as pretty Nettie came up, and a single look from her bright eyes told him that he had won on one battlefield, at least—that of love.

"What's all this crowd—accident? Some one hurt?" floundered patriotic Abel Evans, coming towards the throng now surrounding his rival.

"Mebbe you'll be," muttered old Si, winking solemnly to Seth.

Evans saw pretty Nettie clinging fondly, proudly to an army-blue costume.

"Why," he puffed, growing flustered. "It's Morse," remarked Seth.

"He's jined," added Si.

"And, if I don't miss my guess," serenely chuckled his veteran comrade, "that'll be another 'jinn' soon as Compton's first volunteer helps capture 'Cubby'!"

THE DECLARATION.

How Brave Dolly Madison Saved It from Destruction.

It was just as she was in the act of hurrying away, that Dolly Madison was seized with an inspiration that will ever cause her name to live in the heart of every true American.

She stopped to think, What if the White House should be burned? Did it contain anything of value to the Government that she had neglected? The Declaration of Independence? In a flash she called to mind this most precious of all documents.

Carefully treasured in a case apart from the other papers it had been overlooked in the excitement and confusion. It must be saved at all hazards! Without a moment's hesitation she turned and rushed back into the house.

"Stop! for heaven's sake, stop!" cried her friends, vainly endeavoring to intercept her. Disregarding their commands, regardless of her danger, the brave woman sped to the room containing the treasure for which she was willing to sacrifice her life.

Without attempting to open the glass door of the case she shattered the glass with her clenched hand, matched the precious parchment, and, waving it exultantly above her head, hurried to the door, where she entered her carriage and was rapidly driven away in the direction of Georgetown.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Fourth Abroad.

Very few strictly national holidays are much observed outside of the countries which have created them, and our own Fourth of July is unique in this respect, for not only do the Americans who happen to be traveling abroad when Independence day arrives celebrate it with enthusiasm in all parts of the earth, but potentates and princes from India to Norway cooperate with them in these patriotic endeavors until nowadays these foreign festivities are almost a matter of course.

YOUNG AMERICA AFTER THE FOURTH.

Independence Day.

Thunder out,
Oh, guns and shout!
Rhyme and clang, O ringing, swinging bells!
In exultation;
Cry "Rejoice!"
With lifted voice,
For this morn was born of old a mighty nation.

Sing and spring
Drum and wizz,
Rocket-fires, beyond the spires, above the clanging steeps;
Never earth
Saw the birth
Of so peerless, fearless, glad and free a people.

Ensign Willard's Luck.

Ensign Arthur L. Willard earned one hundred dollars when he planted the Stars and Stripes over a shattered blockhouse at Diana Cay, Cuba. William R. Gratz wrote to the New York Herald on April 23 inclosing a check for $100, which he said was for the man who first placed an American flag on Cuban soil. He said that he sent the money as the nucleus for a fund, for he thought such a patriotic action should be well rewarded.

While the Winslow, the Wilmington and the Hudson were firing on the batteries at Cardenas the Machias was making a wreck of the barracks at Diana Bay. When the Spaniards had scampered away Ensign Willard and three men went ashore and planted the American flag upon the ruins.

Ensign Willard is from Missouri. He was made a cadet in 1893. He was formerly on the Monterey.

PROPOSED ALLIANCE WITH ENGLAND.

If the United States and England should form an alliance, the combined strength would be so great that there would be little chance for enemies to overcome us.
