A move will be made to incorporate the town of Canemah during the coming session of the legislature. For over a half century Canemah has been one of the five outside suburbs of Oregon City. Its people came to postoffice here to get their mail; statesmen, orators and financiers were born and reared in Canemah, and when they went out into the broad world and distinguished themselves, Oregon City was their accredited place of nativity. Canemah has, in times past refused to become a part of the municipality of greater Oregon City. She wants to preserve her own individuality, and perpetuate historic memories. When Canemah becomes a city, the cow and the horse will no longer graze in the public parks; and when the snake eater comes to town and raises his ragged tent on the bank of the spring, the police will pull him in. The majority of the citizens of Canemah favor incorporation.

Cable, day clerk of the St. Charles Hotel in Portland, on Thursday, December 2nd. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist church at Brownsville. Miss Maud Blanchard, of Oregon City, niece of the bride, played the wedding march.

R. B. Criswell, who was arrested at Cottage Grove, and brought here last Thursday for a hearing on a charge of hiring a team at Noblitt's stables and leaving the same at Woodburn, proved to be not the man wanted. It was proven by competent witnesses that he was in Albany at the time the team was taken. Criswell is a sewing machine repairer, and was here for several days a few weeks ago.

The entertainment given by the ladies of the Presbyterian church at the Armory last Friday evening, excelled anything of the kind ever given in Oregon City. The Boys' Brigade drill, and the hospital corps of 10 girls, all did splendid work. The literary and musical programme was excellent, Mr. Clark's solos and Miss Katherine Le Barre's recitations being well received. All were enthusiastically encored, including Fisher's Mandolin Club.

William Rhoda had an experience with a grass widow last Friday night, that almost cost him a dozen dollars, besides a lot anxiety. He was courting Lizzie Oltman, and after bidding her an affectionate farewell, discovered that he was short $12.50. Rhoda had Lizzie arrested, and Justice Schuebel fined her $25. As she was "dead broke," the fine was remitted, and the boys raised a collection to enable her to get out of town.

William Frakes, of Logan, was in the city Monday, and told of a bear adventure in that neighborhood. The event occurred at the home of his son, William M. Frakes, a few nights ago. Mrs. Frakes had left some bones on a table outside of a table near a bedroom window. During the night they were awakened by a noise on the table outside, and discovered a bear lying on the outside. The bear becoming frightened, crawled off the table and made away. Mr. Frakes fired a couple of shots at Bruin from the outside, but he was uninjured.

Several threshing machine proprietors, who were fined $10 each early in the season for running their engines over bridges and culverts without laying down plank as required by law, are now circulating petitions to have the statute changed. The object is to make it obligatory on the county court to fasten down scantlings and plank for the wheels of the engines to run over while crossing bridges and culverts. The threshing machine owners claim it works too much of a hardship to go off a mile or two and gather up plank, every time they have to cross a bridge or culvert.

G. M. Strickler, a pioneer of 1852, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Fields in Canemah Monday. The deceased was born in Pennsylvania in 1825, and came to Oregon in 1852, settling at Portland. Subsequently, he removed to Yamhill county, and for a number of years was proprietor of the Dayton hotel. He married Miss Jacobs, who died a number of years ago. The deceased was buried at Dayton, Tuesday. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Fields, of Canemah, and Mrs. E. S. Elliott, of Portland.
