A pamphlet entitled "Fifty Years of Pacific University," has been received at this office. It contains much interesting matter, and a complete account of the semi-centennial celebration. Dr. George H. Atkinson, the pioneer Congregational minister of Oregon City, was one of the prime movers in establishing the school at Forest Grove. In fact, the school received its first impulse of growth from here. This book says that the first result was an association of ministers, held at Oregon City, September 21st, 1848, at which resolutions were passed establishing an academy at Tualatin Plains—afterwards known as Forest Grove.

A remarkable discovery was made on the S. S. White donation land claim at Mount Pleasant a few days ago by the present owner of the property, W. E. Kellogg. He was tearing away a wall of the old dwelling erected in 1850, and between the wainscoting and weatherboarding, discovered a Kentucky muzzle-loading rifle in a good state of preservation. It had the old-style cap lock, and the charge of bullet and powder that had remained in the barrel for a period of 49 years, was discharged without difficulty. This relic is one of the best specimens of improved Kentucky rifles made in those days, and is a valuable historical relic.

It is now stated that all the delegates from Molalla, Mulino and Carus, and other citizens interested, numbering about 30 altogether, met to inspect the proposed improvements in the Howard hill road one week ago last Tuesday. On account of the rainy weather the Oregon City delegates failed to put in an appearance. The delegation went over both the proposed new road and the old established route over the Howard hill. Our informant states that the entire delegation with the exception of those from Molalla, expressed themselves as in favor of the old Howard hill road, with some changes in the grade. Sam Engle, who was in from Molalla yesterday, states however, that all the people who have to cross the Howard hill to reach Oregon City, favor a new route.
