"Socrates" still lives. When he was dying he said "In future ages I will live with the good." That was before the days of Glad Tidings, but he seems to have taken up his abode at that place. and from thence his august epistle in your last week's number has deigned to cast its radiant countenance upon us. With rapture we have perused it. By the bones of our ancestors, we have never before encountered such lofty thought, pathos and wit. We had al-ways thought old Socrates was of a mild gentle disposition, but since he has taken up his abode in Glad Tidings he has developed an acrimonlous spirit. Socrates, oh Socrates! Why beatest thou the air, for the world does know that many have done well, but as a city Glad Tid-ings excelleth them all, and Marquam is second only to it.

One of our prominent citizens was nightly losing his chickens. Hoping to catch thief he set a steel trap. His la-bors were crowned with abundant success, for on Thursday night he caught a large saunk, commonly called a "pole-cat." It is said if you attack one of these varmints you will need a very long pole, especially if the wind is in favor of the cat. This cat on Thursday night (pugh!) proceeded to fill the ethercal fluid with a subtle aroma that was down right offensive to our olfactory nerves, But his skunkship that so disturbed us was laid low by a discharge of shot into his fragrant carcass.
