W. T. Latourette, a resident of Oregon for the past 18 years, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Henrietta Norris, at the corner of Monroe and 13th streets, last Friday morning. He came down from Salem a few weeks ago in poor health, and never recovered from his illness. The deceased was a private in the late civil war, having served five years. For several years he was a member of the police force at Salem, and later a guard at the penitentiary. The deceased was a native of Michigan, about 50 years old, and leaves a wife and two children. The body of the deceased was taken to Salem for burial Saturday. He was carefully looked after during his last illness by the members of Meade Post, G. A. R.

Julius Priester, who was appointed aide de-camp of the Union Veterans Union, with the rank of colonel on the staff of the commander-in-chief at Washington, is empowered with the duties of mustering officer. Colonel Priester has secured 40 charter members for the new camp, and there are already about a dozen new applications for membership. The camp will perfect its organization in a few days by electing officers, etc. This veteran's union, it is claimed, will not interfere with the work of the Grand Army, but on the contrary, will strengthen it as an organization. No one, however, who was not in active service during the war of the rebellion, or whose name is not enrolled in the archives at Washington as a soldier, can become a member. This is the first command to be organized in Oregon, and its title will be Lawton Command No. 1. However, it looks a little hard to disqualify a soldier for membership because his company was not ordered to the front in time of war, when at the same time he was anxious to be in the strife.
