WASHINGTON, May 11.—Those who expect an early return of the volunteers in accordance with the promise of the war department will no doubt be disappointed when they read the announcement that a number of transports are leaving Manila and none of the organizations are returning upon them.

The fact is, the California and Oregon regiments, the first to go to Manila, are now performing too important service to be spared, as are all other volunteer regiments in the Philippines. Unless peace comes, the volunteers cannot be spared, unless the provincial army is organized. Already much available time has been lost in delaying the organization of that army, and the hope is that the volunteers can be held until the Filipino rebellion is over. Just why the transports should be sent to the United States without troops is unexplained. They are not needed here, for transportation has been provided for all troops under orders to the Philippines.
