"A Verdict of Censure."

The coroner's jury convened on the case of suicide which took place last week brought in a verdict of censure for moving those in a critical condition too great a distance. To emphasize the necessity for such a verdict, the coroner related to the jury the fact that not long ago a man was moved from the city jail in a dying condition.

As the jury did not and the people do not know the facts relative to that case, I think it my duty to inform them. The facts are as follows: A tramp, evidently of good family, was taken sick while on the road. The boys about Clackamas took up a contribution for him and sent him to Oregon City to consult a physician. Upon arrival here he paid over the money to the physician, receiving a supply of medicine worth about 25 cents. This kind hearted doctor then took the man to the night watchman and asked him to shut him up in the city jail, where he laid on the floor for three days without care or attention except such as the night watcuman could give him. On the evening of the third day, becoming alarmed at his condition, the watchman called Drs. Carrl and Sommer. Upon arrival at the jail, we found the poor fellow just alive, but dying from pneumonia. Several spectators were present, among them N. R. Lang, superintendent of the Willamette Pulp and Paper Company, who kindly offered to pay all expenses if anything could be done for the unfortunate. I could only tell him that it was our duty to look out for him, but he being in extremis, the only thing to do was to remove him to some place cleaner and better than the basement of the city jail, that he might die in better quarters. While awaiting the arrival of the con vevance it was necessary to hold him in my arms to prevent him from dving on the spot. In this I was assisted by one of the boys present. He was conveyed to the residence of Mrs. Winesett, and shortly after died. Had the coroner explained to the jury the whole story-who took his money and then turned the man (not a criminal, whose only offerse was to be taken sick in a strange land) over to the night watchman to be locked up in the city jail, there to die like a dog-I think the verdict of censure would have been amended or placed where it belongs. The question of useless inquests is still another story, and will be exploited in due time. Meanwhile the following lines from "Measure for Measure" are quite appropriate: "But man, proud man. Drest in a little brief authority, Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd. His glassy essence, like an angry ape, Plays such fantastic trick before high

Our Money System.

[Written for the Courier-Herald by Argus.] A local contemporary, while using the free plate gold literature, perverted the following from Emerson:

"Speak what you think today in hard words, and tomorrow speak what tomorrow thinks in hard words again, even though it contradicts everything you said today," and "A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds." Some such facetious excuses are necessary to reconcile the mass of contradictions entailed on the supporters of the gold standard. But we will not allow them both horns of the dilemma. Under the double or bimetalic standaad, silver was as real and good, and a little more real and a little better money than gold for a long period, and if it is now only a credit substitute for money, our volume of real money is therefore diminished to the extent of our amount of silver, of about one-half.

What then becomes of the quantitative theory so often dinned in our ears that "supply and demand rules prices"? We have been told again and again that this law applies to money, as to other commodities, and that supply and demand, and not legislation, rules the price of money.

Suppose we admit the supply and demand argument, still if legislation can W. Herald. influence the supply and demand of money, it must be admitted that it ean affect general values, not in opposition to, but through and by means of the law of supply and demand. When two great nations like the United States and France in the same year close their mints to the coinage of silver it certainly affected the demand, and this, with the practice of our treasury department of allowing its creditors to demand gold on all occasions, then the passing of the special contract gold clause affected the demand so much that silver depreciated nearly 15 per cent in 12 years. But so long as the Indian mints were kept open to take all that came, that is, until 1893, we never had the serious difference we have had since. When the Indian demand was stopped silver fell 23 points in 24 hours, and has never been nor never will be reestablished without fresh legislation for open mintage.

If, then, the enlarged use of gold. which is denied to silver, were again allowed and the special contract legislation in favor of gold annulled our silver credit in circulation would be changed again to real money, thus doubling our supply, and on the quantitative theo y would double the price of our labor as d produce or that which our money buys n a free market.

Almost Ancient History.

Many, many years ago, when the sainted Dr. John McLaughlin stood as foster father to pioneer Oregonians, and the Hudson Bay Company operated a trading post at Oregon City, a leading Men merchant of the log-cabin metropolis purchased a large stock of men's clothing at San Francisco, and, with much labor, imported the goods to the present site of the picturesque Willamette Falls. The merchant was a very good man, but he did not advertise and the last of that 'imported stock" was sold last week in an auction store, on First street, in Portland, to satisfy a claim held by Major Charman, of our charming sister city Relic hunters were out in force and many of the shelf worn articles brought fancy

The invoice of goods sold included fur caps, peculiar looking boots and queer shoes, corduroy pants and jeans waist coats and a thousand and one other oddities that lack of space will not permit of mention here.

We print this paragraph to call attention to the fact that advertising always pays. Had the Oregon City merchant shown the one-hundredth part of enterprise that the Portland auctioneer did, he would have sold his goods and chattels forty or fifty years ago, and realized enough from the increment of interest on the price of sales, to spend his declining days in peace and pleaty,-N.

All Going to the Circus.

In this gorgeous display are shown over 100 beautiful dens and cages of wild anamals, 500 horses, 25 elephants and nearly a thousand people, and the cosumes throughout are of the fluest silks, satins and cloth of gold.
