Main shows at Portland, on Monday, Sept. 4th, and give the most novel and exciting exhibition that has ever been given to the public. They will be dressed as they were in Cuba, where they took part in the battles of San Juan Hill, Daiquiri, Sibony and El Caney.

Street Commissioner John Green is making some extensive improvements on upper Seventh street. A wooden curbing or drain is being put down on both sides of the street, which will carry off all the surface water likely to accumulate. It will be eight to 12 inches deep and covered with three boards, so that the center board can be taken up, should the drain become clogged. The drain heretofore used was only 8x12 inches, and frequently clogged, causing the water to flood the street.

Captain S. E. Miller, the well known pioneer of Canemah, and veteran steamboat commander, is one of the enterprising citizens of that thriving suburb. He is now 71 years old, but still possesses a lot of the push that made him one of the first successful navigators on the Willamette river. With his own hands he has made many improvements on his home place, and recently filled a lot of low ground adjoining his lot, hauling the dirt with a cart and horse, without any assistance.

Among the divorce suits filed in the circuit court during the past week were Elizabeth Roos vs William Roos, of Clackamas county. The plaintiff alleges cruel and inhuman treatment, and wants the custody of the minor child. Myrtle J. Pye, of Multnomah county, evidently don't want any more matrimonial pie for her portion. She alleges a whole catalogue of brutal treatment on the part of Frederick J. Pye, winding up with desertion. Mrs. Pye also wants the custody of a minor child. J. R. Wells, of Clackamas county, wants a divorce from Theresa L. Wells, who deserted him in 1896. Jennie W. Reich, of Multnomah county, asks for a separation from Armin H. Reich, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment; also custody of minor child.

According to the testimony before the coroner's jury Saturday night, George F. Mitchell aged 22, was killed while trying to alight from the south-bound freight train at Parkplace. Coroner Strickland held an inquest, and the jury returned a verdict of accidental death, with no blame attached to anyone for the accident. It transpired that the deceased was the son of W. E. Mitchell, a merchant of Gervais, formerly of Salem. He was on his way home from Spokane, and it is an unexplained matter why he was riding on a freight train. Mr. Mitchell came down Sunday and took the body of his son to Salem. The deceased was a member of the Gervais lodge of Workmen, and a delegation from Falls City lodge, acted as pallbearers when the corpse was carried to the train. The funeral was held at Salem Tuesday under the auspices of the A. O. U. W. A Salem paper says that young Mitchell was to have been married to Miss Helen Southwick, of Polk county in a few weeks.
