Crop Reports and Talks With

Hon. J. L. Kruge, of Wilsonville, who was in town Saturday, stated that he believed it was a mistaken idea for farmers to pay a fancy price for hogs to eat damaged wheat, as only a small percentage of the grain was damaged by sprouting. About three per cent of his wheat was sprouted, but new cylinder teeth in the thresher caused the sprouted grains to break and they were separated from the clean wheat. Mr. Kruse believes that the greater part of the wheat threshed can be marketed.

It is probable, as a result of the recent rainy season that Oregon farmers will again adopt the practice of stacking wheat after it is bound from the resper. Much of the grain could have been saved from damage, had it been stacked before the rains came. shcc'ts can be preserved by capping the same, the grains standing an immense method. Early wheat near the timber suffered most. It is surprising, however, how much of the wheat threshed is marketable after the continued ful crop. Hops never looked better.

fall grain was in good condition in the stack, awaiting the arrival of the thresher. He had cut his ripened spring wheat since the rain, which was also in good condition, and expected to stack the same on the next day.

Hop growers have evidently learned that it is not the best plan to contract their hops for sale in advance of picking, as not a single contract has been filed in the county recorder's office this season. The growers, who contracted their hops for three years during the last season, are still at the mercy of the hop buyer. Growers evidently had no trouble in getting money for picking expenses this season, and were not compelled to bind out their crops at a stated price. A few farmers have mortgaged their crops for picking money, but no price per pound is stipulated.

O. Kocher, of Mark's Prairie, demonstrated the fact this season that it pays to string hops from one pole to an- fence. Good spring of water. Excelvines were strung with pieces of twine acre. Call on or address G. B. Dimick, between the poles, a very marked improvement was shown in the quality and quantity of the hops.

town Wednesday, reports that the farmers in that section all have their grain stacked, that have not already threshed. He further says that the wheat is in good condition there, considering the extent of the rains that have fallen.

John F. Koehler, of Canby, brought to town Wednesday a sample of wheat that stood out in the shock during the rains, that is really in fair condition. Mr. Koehler says that wheat, which was looked after properly in the shock during the rains was not seriously damaged. Of course, where farmers were slack in looking after the shocks and did not keep them standing so that the water would run off and give them a chance to air and dry, the grains ment roll ready for the board of equalisprouted.

The Oregon City-Portland bicycle path is practically completed as far as Milwaukie. The finishing touches are being put on the path, such as leveling. covering with sand, drainage, etc. With Some farmers still contend that wheat the completion of the path to Milwaukie the last of the $1200 raised by selling bicycle tags will have been expended. amount of rain when protected by this Even a part of this was raised by selling tags in Multnomah county. ROAD MATTERS.

Board of County Commissioners' Aftermath and Gossip.

Among the items of business transacted by the board of county commissioners was the granting of the petition of John Ferguson, et al, for a county road on the Abernethy. This matter has been before the county court on petition, remonstrance, and interspersed with claims for damages, for the past three years. Through an inadvertence on his part, Mr. Benson did not have in a claim for damages at this term, or he would have received a nominal amount for damages by reason of the road passing through his premises. The opening of this road will accommodate a number of families, who can now get to market without going a mile or two out of the way.

The matter of the petition for a county road from Third street to the bluff to intersect the Lawton road, was postponed until the October term. F. T.
