Montana Life.

Editor COURIER-HERALD: May I record some impressions of Montana life: First, the disregard of the value of money on every hand; "come easy, go easy" seems to be the motto. One example will illustrate all. The writer was called to a country wedding. The bride had just come from an Eastern state, and was an utter stranger.

The groom was with a threshing crew and was practically a stranger at the wedding. One of the threshing crew said "boys, let us make a purse up for the couple," whereupon the man, on whose ranch the machine happened to be, threw in $20 and others various sums until a large purse was made up. This disposition is manifested everywhere. Second, there is positively no gold here, all is currency. Third, the large incorporation of single men as compared with single women. For example at Sunday evening services there was an audience of about 100. The single girls were out in full and there were only six, while there were probably fifty single young men. Many of the ranches, probably half of them have not got a woman on them. This condition cannot last, because those who are married are raising large families about equally divided, boys and girls. It is said that gonorrhea, glander and backbiting is practical unknown in this country.

Harvest is just getting well underway. There is a large crop of barley, oats and wheat. Each ranch of 160 acres is expected to turn out about 2500 to 3000 bushels. Sometimes it will stand out in the shock until the beginning of the new year. However, they are both cutting and threshing now, but the crop is so large that the season will be well advanced into winter before all the threshing is done.

While there are saloons here, to me one of the hopeful signs of the temperance cause is the liquor traffic seems to be dying with "dry rot." No one wants to employ a drunkard, and to be a drinking man is no credit to any one, even in this country and my observation is that the same in Oregon.

The stores here are large. Goods are not much higher than in Oregon, except along a few fruits and especially all kinds of domestic fruit.

There are very few poor people here now. It is warmer here now than it was when we left Oregon, yet it is claimed that it is liable to snow at any time. Farmers do not fear rain, but that it will snow and beat down their grain in the fields.

The people are wide awake and on the go.

A good cow is worth $50 but horses are very cheap. The minister bought a good buggy horse for $10, and he knows of a ranchman buying 100 head for $800. Though it is said to get so dreadful cold, yet horses can live on the range all winter. The boys cannot go bathing here except in the hot springs and tubs. The mountain streams are as cold as ice.
