AN EXCITING CHASE. JABE WON THE BELLE DIRECTORY

A CANDE RACE IN WHICH A HUMAN YET HIS FACE WAS HOMELY ENOUGH LIFE WAS THE STAKE.

The Adventure of a Missionary In the Kongo Country and Now He Saved a Native From Being Cooked and Union by the Canaibals.

The stories that missionaries send home ofter throw a vivid light upon the dark and savage conditions that encompass them. One of the teachers of the American Baptist Missionary union, in his annual report, tells of a recent breident that occurred far up the Kongo river among the natives living around the shores of Lake Tumba, only a short distance south of the big river.

Early one Sunday morning, as the missionary and his wife were preparing for the duties of the day, they heard a shout from the lake. An old man was seen seated in a canoe, which a number of stalwart fellows were paddling as fast as they could toward the little river that carries the waters of the lake to the Kongo, a few miles north. The old man was crying in a frantic and despairing voice: "Mpebe na Monkasa."

These were the names by which the missionary and his wife are known to the natives. The old fellow called them again and again, till he saw the white man and his wife standing on the beach. Then he shouted to them: "Oh, come and save me! They are taking me away to kill and eat me!" The missionary understood the situa- ed it. tion at once. The place is not more than a day's travel from the mouth of the great Mobangi tributary of the Kongo. The banks of the Mobangi are lined with cannibal tribes, and it is one of the greatest bottleds of cannibalcanoes sent out from these tribes to the districts a little south of the Kongo for no other purpose than to buy slaves or steal men to carry away to their homes for their cannibal feasts. Here was an old friend of the missiararies who had fallen into the power of these savage foragers. Not a moment was to be lost, for the canoe was shooting past the station and rapidly approaching the foot of the lake.

At a word from the white man a half dozen young blacks inunched a canoe in the lake and plied their padthey were pursued, redoubled their endead earnest, and the stake was a human life.

There were six of the pursuers and only four of the fugutive ennoemen The chasing party had a larger sum if they was goin to be children come total of muscle, and this advantage began to tell. Slowly the missionary boat too, so's they wouldn't realize it. The gained on the cannibals, who saw at last that they would certainly be caught before they reached the river. Then they paddled like mad for the shore, and the pursuers were only a few boat lengths from them as they ran their canoe up on the beach.

The fourth man was made a prisoner and was taken back to the missionary settlement with the poor old captive. who was now trembling with joy as a few moments before he had quaked with fear. The missionary says that if he had not called for help he would

The expected then happened. Of course, the savages did not relish the idea of returning to their people without any victim and with one of their party missing. The white man felt certain they would try to ransom their comrade, and, sure enough, the crestfallen man eaters after a little while appeared within bailing distance.

They had brass wire, they shouted, and how much did the white man want in exchange for their friend.

He wanted all they had, and after considerable parleying a lot of wire was brought half way to the station. The old man said he was sure this wire was all his captors had in the canoe, and finally it was accepted and the prisoner released. The : probably made their way as best they could back to their tribe.

The wire was worth only $4, but the missionary says this was enough to keep the old man in food for over nine months, and the fair inference is that the cost of living on the upper Kongo has been reduced to a bedrock basis.

The Kongo state is rigorously suppressing cannibalism as far as its influence extends, and therefore the natives who indulge in the practice no longer dare, in accordance with their former custom, to send large expeditions out to buy slaves. Now and then, however, a small party engage in the hazardous business, hoping by the smallness of their numbers to escape the attention of the whites.—New York

Prevalence of the Lying Habit.

Did you ever count up how many times in the course of a day you tell a lie even though you consider yourself a truthful person? You tell a lie when a friend asks if a new hat is becoming, when you praise something your hostess cooks and when you say you had a good time in bidding her goodby. You must lie or offend a hundred a day, and you naturally prefer to lie. Its effects may be as bad as those of giving offense, but they are not so apparent.-Atchison Globe.

"Well, in spite o' him bein so blame homely that he dassent look a woman in the face, this yere cuss was always wantin to git married, but, o' course, they wan't no way to get at it. He advertised some in the city paper an writ letters to lots o' women that way. but he was honest to the core, an when the thing got along fur enough so's they might anything come o' it he always sent his photograph, an that end-

"Oncet they was a mighty likely widow from way back east that got to likin Jube purty well through his netter writin, an I must say he was a good hand at that, before he sent his piel shur. After studyin over his linements for a couple o' months she made Explorers have often told of the up her mind to come on anyhow, but List of All Societies in this Com ty With when she ackshully saw Jabe in the fiesh she backed out an married Si Peter, an she made him a mighty fine wife, barrin the fact that she had a 20-year-old son that bobbed up after the ceremony an turned out to be as shiftless as it's possible fur a man to git an live.

"Then Jabe gits desperit, an he up an offers a bundred dollars reward to anybody as will git him a pardner. But Myrtle Lodge No. 24, D, of H -avery Friday in Willamette hall. that didn't amount to much. Ole Dud Harris 'lowed he'd make his oldest girl, Mirandy, the one that had the dles with all their might. It was an harelip, jine him, an Jabe, knowin exciting chase. The cannibals, seeing his own shortcomin's, was satisfied to git anybody most, but Mirandy took willamette Camp No. 148, W. of W.-Flist and collectic fits an died before the weddin third Fridsysin Willamette Ball. ergies to reach the river a few miles epileptic fits an died before the weddin north of them. It was a boat race in come off, an folks all aroun said it was a judgment on Dud.

Then Jim Damm brung aroun his half witted girl, an Jube studied a long while over it, thinkin mebby that with his ugliness they'd better be fools, girl seemed to take a fancy to Jabe right away an wanted to kiss him, but he changed his mind right off, properly decidin that he couldn't stand anybody that was as big a fool as that.

The cannibals jumped out and three Run an give a show, an he a ked for of these made their escape into the people to come up on the platform an be hypnotized. Everybody most was able quantity of brass wire, the form afraid to go till Jabe made the break, of money they use in buying slaves. sayin it didn't matter much what become o' him nohow, an then five more went up like they alluz do "Well, the minit this here hypnotist took hold o' Jabe's head an tilted it back to git a good look in his eyes he give a funny little jump an says: "'I can't do nothin with you. Why, probably have been killed before night. man, you may not know it, but you got more power than I have. If you fix them line blue eyes o' your'n co anybody, they just nachelly have to do what you say.'

"Then be let Jabe go an made Wash Diffins fight bumblehees an preten' he was a dog an do the most outlandish things you ever heard of I gosh, it was funny, an he made some o' the others act up, too, but none so much as ole Wash, on the next day he went away.

"But he made a mighty big change in Jabe's life. Y'see up to this time Jabe allus dropped his eyes every time he see a woman comin. an the woman allus looked the other way. But now Jabe made up his mind to try it, an so he looked, an all the women knowed about it, so they looked, an they found out that them eyes was mighty fine if you looked at 'em so keen you couldn't see the rest o' his face. They was mostly scared, too, since they heard as how Jabe was a hypnotizer if he only wanted to be that-a-way; but, o' course, that only made 'em look all the

"First off, Jabe didn't have the sand to look at the best lookin girls, but only the homely ones, an it wasn't two weeks till be could o' had his choice o' a dozen girls. You see, they got to talkin to him an studyin them eyes o' hiss'n, an fast thing they knowed they was hankerin after 'em. But Jabe got particlar. They was a time when he'd been tickled to death to have any girl that wore dresses keep comp'ny with him, but he kep' raisin his idees every day till fin'ly he set his mind on winnin Hetty Allen, that was the blamedest purtiest girl in the whole country an had a dozen fine lookin fellers with Highland No. 261, P. of A.-First Saturday in good horses an burries an some land tryin to court her, an blame if he didn't Barlow No. 262, P. of H .- First and third Satur git her. An the funniest part of it all is that there am't no purtier young uns anywhere than them seven chil dren o' Jabe's. An they all got blue eyes, every one of 'em, no the rest is like their mother atmosphere, to view it, the sun must have a decidedly blue it that to the naked eye. The proper calor of the sun is blue-not merely blub h, but positively and distinctly blue."
