James Adkins, of Adkins Brothers, sawmill men near Canby, was in town Saturday. This firm is now busy delivering 150,000 feet of lumber on the road between their mill and Canby, which the road supervisor is having laid. On the last day of the meeting of the board of county commissioners, Adkins Brothers offered to donate this amount of lumber, provided the county would lay it down. Their offer was accepted. There is four miles of road between this mill and Canby, and this firm improved a mile and a half of it last year. This road is used by a large number of farmers, going to and from Canby.

W. H. Counsell, roadmaster, was in town Friday. He reports good progress on the Molalla road. The Howard bill is now in good condition, and the work is progressing slowly on the Spangler lill. On account of the continued rains and heavy traffic, the mud is very deep in the latter piece of road. They are now putting down large rock in the bottom of the roadway, which will be pressed into solid position with a roller weighing several tons. A layer of crushed rock will be put on top of this, that will also be rolled until it is solid. Mr. Counsell says that in view of the fact that the delay in getting lumber has retarded the work of improvement on a part of the road, it would have been more economical for the county to have paid more for the lumber, and secured it earlier in the season.

Among the railroad rumors is one that an Albany local will be put on the Southern Pacific running from Portland to this city, leaving in the morning and returning at night, giving the through trains an opportunity to make faster time between this city and Portland.—Albany Democrat.

The Humane Society is busy looking after parties who are in the habit of tying their horses under the trees on the west side of the river and allowing them to stand all day and part of the night without food or shelter. There is a good feed yard in the city, and there can be no excuse for such acts of cruelty.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company has adopted a new time card, which went into effect Sunday night. The north-bound day passenger passes here at 6:03 instead of 6:17 as formerly. The Woodburn train now makes close connection with the morning overland. A change was made in the time of running the freight trains.

Owing to the fact that the water in the upper Willamette river has raised but about four feet above low water mark at any time this fall, and only remained at that stage a day or two, the O. Captain L. E. Pratt, a prominent pioneer of 1857, and father of W. E. Pratt, of this city, died at Salem Sunday. He was born in Massachusetts in 1824, and arrived at Salem in June, 1857. The deceased built the first woolen mill in Salem, and his daughter, now Mrs. Julia Hass, wove the first piece of cloth made in the mills. This mill was destroyed by fire in the early 60s. For many years he was prominent in steamboating, a captain on several river boats for a number of years. In 1864 he planned and built the Oregon City woolen mills securing the machinery from the East. He built the first breakwater here, and owned stock in the Peoples

Transportation Company. He left three children, Mrs. Mary E. Hass and Mrs. Ida M. Babcock, of Salem, and W. E. Pratt, of Oregon City.

Last Thursday night Sheriff Cooke received a dispatch from the sheriff at Bridgeport, to arrest C. E. Keller on a charge of murder committed the 27th day of last August. An alleged detective, named Austin, who was working by the side of Keller in the paper mills, furnished the astounding information that led to his arrest. Austin had a photograph and description that tallied with the make-up of Keller in many details. The latter was given a rigid examination by the district attorney, but readily proved an alibi. He came here last June from Nebraska, and worked in Charman's brickyard during the summer. E. E. Charman proved by his account books, that Keller was working for him at the time the murder was said to have been committed in Ohio. Other witnesses stated that Keller was here during the summer. He was at once discharged from custody. Austin expected to get the $300 reward offered for the arrest of the Ohio murderer.
