PERSONAL MENTION.

Dr. and Mrs. Clayton S. Seamann returned from their bridal trip last Saturday.

E. E. Wilson, a Corvallis attorney, was visiting friends here during the week.

Mrs. H. W. Wick, of Tacoma, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Andrews.

Miss Tillie Henrici, of this city, is visiting her sister, Mrs. T. West, in Portland.

O. P. Miller, of Portland, was in the city during the week, looking after his real estate interests here.

John Fichter, of Chicago, Ill., a graduate of the Y. M. C. A. training school, is visiting James McIntyre.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Bestow and G. H. Bastow, of Portland, were visiting relatives here during the past week.

Miss Minnie Wolfer, of Hubbard, who has been visiting her cousin, Mrs. G. B. Dimick, returned home Monday.

J. W. Silvey, of Washougal, Wash., has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Charles Andrews, during the past week.

County Commissioner S. F. Marks and daughter, Miss Bertha, of Mark's Prairie, were visitors in this city Saturday.

Mrs. Ernestina Leipc, of Portland, was visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Spies, at Linn's mill, during the week.

Milo Lee, of Canby, has returned from an extended sojourn at Kelo, Wash., where he was employed in a sawmill.

George Brown, a well known farmer living near Barton, was in town Friday. He reported that crops look poorly in his neighborhood.

Mrs. Milton Evans, who was a resident of New Era precinct 18 years ago, has returned after an extended residence in California.

E. P. Carter, superintendent of the Clackamas hatchery, and J. W. Berriam left for Rogue river Monday morning on a tour of inspection.

Henry Reed, sister and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Matt Reed, Willard W. Austin and sisters, were among the Logan people in the city Monday.

Ed Nachend returned from the East the latter part of last week, and visited his cousin, G. H. Oldenburg, before going to his home in Eastern Oregon.

Sam Baechler, of Woodburn, who is running a soda water and ice cream stand at the New Era spiritualist camp meeting ground, was in town Tuesday.

P. DeShields, a prominent farmer of Clackamas precinct, was in town Monday, and reported that fall wheat in his vicinity, gave promise of a good yield.

Miss Reva Gray, who is now living with Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Bestow in Portland, has been visiting her parents, who has been living with her sister at Alamosa, Colo., for the past two years.

Joshua Gorbett, the Colton merchant, was in town Tuesday, and reported that tall and spring grain looked well, and that the hay crop would be splendid, with the exception clover, which had been injured to the extent of about a hundred tons. The rust had appeared in the grain fields, but no serious damage is anticipated.

John Lewellen, of Springwater, county commissioner elect, was in the city Tuesday. He reported that the yield of fall wheat will be short in that section, but the spring-sown wheat has a promising appearance. The damage to hay was slight there, as but little clover hay is grown. However, in the Logan country the damage to the hay crop is extensive.

W. J. Lewellen, postmaster and merchant at Springwater, accompanied by Mrs. Lewellen, returned Tuesday from an extended trip through the Willamette valley. Mr. Lewellen reported that the wheat crop looked bad in many places, and that considerable hay was damaged. While on the trip they visited many places of interest throughout the different counties, and enjoyed their trip immensely.

W. C. Buckner, the Highland merchant, was in Oregon City Tuesday. He stated that the fall wheat does not present a promising appearance, although it is believed that the yield of spring grain will be good. Both the cut and standing clover hay in that section is ruined, the mold having set in. Mr. Buckner drove in a pair of fine bunch grass horses, that had been broke to work, during the past week.

P. M. Graves, a well known Molalla farmer, was in Oregon City Saturday, accompanied by Mrs. Graves, their daughter, Miss Ivy Graves, and his sister, Miss Dollie Graves, of Silverton. The entire party made a short trip to Portland, while here. Mr. Graves said that the late rains had been of material benefit to the late sown grain, hay, vegetables, and was materially improving the yield prospect of fall-sown wheat. In fact, he did not believe that fall wheat was injured to the extent at first believed by many farmers, and that those who plowed up their fields were in too great a hurry—that they were prematurely frightened over the outlook.

A. J. Sawtell, the well known teasel grower, of Molalla, was in the city during the week, having shipped his last consignment of the previous year's crop East. For 40 years Mr. Sawtell has raised teasels extensively and supplied Eastern and Western woolen mills. He has retired after handling thousands of dollars received for teasels, much of which was paid out for help in producing the teasels. The Yankee invention of a metal contrivance to take the place of teasels in raising the nap on certain kinds of woolen cloths, has lessened the demand for the teasel grown by nature. Mr. Sawtell, however, says that teasels can still be grown profitably, provided that the grower does not have to employ too much labor.

Joseph Garrow will attend the alumni reunion of the Parkplace high school of Oregon City, which takes place tomorrow night. He and his brother graduated from this institution three years ago under Principal J. W. Gray. This gentleman came to Corvallis to be present at the graduation of these two young men from the O. A. C. President Apperson who presented them with diplomas Wednesday, also presented their high school diplomas.—Corvallis Gazette.

Volney Mack, aged 41, son of W. O. Mack, of Canby, died suddenly of concussion of the brain or heart trouble last Thursday afternoon. He was standing on a table cleaning a roof gutter and fell to the ground, where he was found dead by his father a few minutes afterward. Coroner Strickland was summoned, but did not deem an inquest necessary, as death had evidently resulted from natural causes. The deceased had been in poor health for many years. He was the son of a pioneer, and was born at Macksburg in this county.

Edward Bailey, the 15-year old son of W. J. Bailey, of Clackamas Station, met with a serious accident while driving a team and wagon on his father's farm. The team ran away down grade over logs and stumps, finally throwing out the driver to the ground his face striking a knot on a log and cutting a severe gash through his upper lip. A two-year old brother was thrown out of the wagon to the ground, but fortunately escaped injury. The wagon and harness were badly wrecked. Young Bailey was brought to town and his wounds were sewed up by Dr. Strickland.

The work of excavating on the Stevens property on the corner of Main and Sixth streets, is progressing in a satisfactory way. The ground occupied by the Chinese wash house, recently torn down, has been graded preparatory to receiving the corner dwelling to be moved back from its frontage on Main street. The Chinese laundry has moved into the palatial brick on upper Main street, at one time occupied by Burmeister & Andresen's jewelry store. Young Brothers have several teams at work hauling dirt from the excavation for the new Stevens building, and there is yet considerable to do before the ground on the corner is reduced to the street level.

The spiritualist camp meeting began its annual session at New Era last Sunday. On the Saturday night previous there was a dance at the hall across the road from the grounds, which was a very pleasant affair. Considering the condition of the weather, the attendance was good for a first day session. A number of Oregon City people were in attendance, who went up on the train, while quite a number rode their wheels. Several young ladies, who rode up on their wheels, did not bring their wraps and when a cold wave, accompanied by rain struck the grounds about 10:30 they received the full benefit of the change in climatic conditions. At the morning session Professor W. C. Bowman gave an able lecture on "The Lights and Shadows of Mediums." In the afternoon Mrs. Georgia Gladys Cooley, of Chicago, gave an interesting lecture, and some tests. There were already quite a number of campers, and the attendance will no doubt be large, now that there is good weather. The camp meeting will continue in session until July 17th.

Read the posters in your local post-office to ascertain as to price, etc., about the Fourth of July excursion up the Columbia to Multnomah falls, and then on to Bonneville. Remember, a little rain now indicates clear, warm weather. Buy your tickets, and be one of the fortunate ones who will enjoy this most enjoyable excursion.
