FOLDED TRANSFERS. They Increase a Conductor's Work and Are Trying to His Temper. 'Some people have no sympathy for street car conductors,' said one of their number after he had had a peculiarly lively time in making change and giving and collecting transfers, says the New York Times.

'Now,' continued the conductor, 'there is one little matter that would save us lots of trouble if the people would only bear it in mind, and that is the way they hand in their transfers.'

'Some men and a few women know enough to hand us the little strips of paper just as they receive them—that is, spread out in such a way that we can glance at them, see that they are all right and then place them with the package already collected. The majority of people don't do this, and as a rule the women are the worst of the lot.'

'When a woman gets a transfer, she folds it up into as small a space as possible and then stows it away in her purse. When the time comes to collect this from her, she fishes the wad of paper out of the purse, hands it to the conductor and sits back in her seat content with what she has done.'

'The conductor has to unfold this piece of paper to see if it is really the proper transfer. This takes time, and when there are a dozen women on the car all doing the same thing the poor conductor has more than he can do to keep his temper. Men as a rule don't fold their transfers, but content themselves with shoving the slips into their pockets and then producing a crumpled piece of paper when it is called for, tossing it to the conductor, who has to smooth it into shape.'

'The same people would never think of handing in a railroad or theater ticket in the same way.'

his selfish ambitions and make him serve others instead of himself? It was after midnight, and still he sat there with his mother's letter before him. The new century was his to enter. Rich powers of mind and strength were his to enjoy. What would he choose as he looked into the future? Edward Blake, college student, you are at the most critical point in all your life now. The Spirit will not always strive with your soul. Your mother's prayers cannot save you if you do not give your heart to God. Will you be Christ's man or not? Leave him alone with God and pray for him that he may cry before the morning breaks, 'O Christ, thou art my Lord and my God!'

The Rock of Ages has been cleft for me, But thou wilt never save against my will; The water and the blood have flowed from thee, But I must let that blood my being fill.

Oh, Spirit, pleading with strong tears and pain, Grant that this soul may humbly let thee in! Show him the Christ who came for sinful men And in his heart thy work of grace begin.

THE END.
