Masonic Semi-Centennial.

The Masonic grand lodge of Oregon celebrated its semi-centennial anniversary in Portland yesterday afternoon. It was first organized in Oregon City.

In the spring of 1816 Joseph Hill, W. P. Dougherty, F. C. Cason and other Masons met in Oregon City and made arrangements to send back to Missouri for a charter authorizing them to start a lodge. Communicating with Missouri in those days meant "crossing the plains" twice on wagons, and so the proposed charter members did not expect to organize that year. Although the charter was granted October 15, 1846, it was not until the spring of 1848 that an opportunity occurred to send the document from St. Louis on its long journey to Oregon. P. B. Cornwall, who was starting west in an emigrant train, was entrusted with the charter, and at a point on the road east of the Rocky mountains he gave it to Orrin and Joseph Kellogg. The parchment was carefully tucked away in a hair trunk which is now in possession of the Oregon City lodge, whose members prize it as a precious souvenir of early times.

The Kelloggs delivered the charter to Joseph Hill, who became the first worthy master of the new lodge. W. P. Dougherty was chosen senior ward and F. C. Cason junior warden. The lodge was organized September 11, 1848. It was known as No. 84 in the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, and was the first Masonic lodge instituted west of the Rocky mountains.

There being now three subordinate lodges in the territory, steps were soon taken to form a grand lodge, and on September 13, 1851, delegates from the three lodges met at Oregon City to organize a grand lodge. There were present as delegates from Multnomah Lodge, J. C. Ainsworth, Foroes Barclay and R. R. Thompson.

A Socialist Lecture.

Rev. J. Stitt Wilson, of Chicago, gave an interesting and instructive lecture on "Socialism" to an attentive audience at the Y. M. C. A. hall last Saturday evening. "Socialism," said Mr. Wilson, "offers the only constructive solution to the industrial problems now confronting the civilized world. As 50 years ago the only logical place for a Christian was with the 'Abolitionists,' so at present the logical position of a Christian is with the socialists." Being convinced of the foregoing truths, Rev. Wilson resigned a lucrative Chicago pastorate to devote his time and talent to the advocacy of industrial emancipation. He is a forceful and scholarly speaker and is doing excellent work in the rapidly recruiting ranks of socialists.

Teachers' Meeting.

A joint meeting of the teachers of Clackamas and Multnomah counties was held Saturday at the Willsburg school. There was a large attendance of teachers and visitors from both counties, and the institute was considered one of the most successful yet held. A platform had been erected under the trees in the school yard, the intention being to give the program out of doors, but as the weather was threatening, the meeting was held in the school building. R. F. Robinson, school superintendent of Multnomah county, was in charge, and after a few remarks, introduced H. F. Allen, principal of the Willsburg school.

Mr. Allen, in his address of welcome, dwelt on the responsibility of a teacher and the high characteristics necessary to meet them. The response was by Clackamas County Superintendent J. C. Zinser. His remarks were well chosen, and received attention. He was of the opinion that the value of local institutes is in the good resulting from the exchange of ideas and the comparison of methods of instruction. Education is a living issue, and requires constant study, growth and education. The public school, he maintained, is the place where all common interests meet and from which, later on, they radiate into every phase of public and national life. Mr. Allen concluded with the statement that the mental life of the child must be developed as it served to lift one from a lowly to a higher plane.

Miss Grace Holmes followed with a paper on "Thought Element in Reading."

A pleasing vocal solo was rendered by Miss Hannah G. Schloth, after which Professor Robinson presented the diplomas to five girls who had completed the course prescribed in the grammar schools.

The afternoon session opened with a solo by Miss Inogen Harding. "Memory Gems in Primary Work," by D. A. Grou of the Park school, was full of interest and new ideas. Misses Henderson and Monroe, teachers in the Central school, next sang a charming duet which was greeted with much applause.

An address was then delivered by J. H. Ackerman, state superintendent of public instruction. The subject was "Ideals."

Miss Fannie G. Porter, L. A. Wilson and Mrs. G. M. Strange were members of the committee on resolutions.

Grange Department.

Mollala Grange No. 40, Patrons of Husbandry on Saturday, June 8th, held a very pleasant meeting. The Order provides that one day be devoted to the amusement and entertainment of the little ones, and we followed this time honored usage on last Saturday, and met an early hour, and the first order was the raising of a new flag pole and "Old Glory" was furled to the breeze.

The members of the grange held a short business session with closed doors. Two applications for membership were received. W. F. Case, our very efficient and worthy secretary, tendered his resignation having received a federal appointment. We wish him success in his new field of labor, but will greatly miss his presence and assistance in our meetings. Mrs. Ida M. Graves was elected to fill the vacancy.

At noon all repaired to the lower hall and partook of the many good things that the farmers' wives know so well how to prepare.

At 1:30 p. m. the following interesting program was rendered:

Recitation, Edward Hammond. Recitation, "Picture and a Poem," Elva Erikson. Recitation, "How He Saved St. Michael's," Iva Graves.

Address, "Our American Flag," Alex Thomson. Instrumental music, Dibble orchestra. At the close of the program the little folks were treated to oranges and candy. Many of the numbers on the program were well and heartily applauded. More than 100 people were in attendance.

We gladly welcome any visiting patrons on the second Saturday of each month at 10 a. m.

MARY S. HOWARD, Lecturer.

ROAD OF THE FALLS

There is an urgent demand for cheaper lights in Oregon City, and it is evident that the efforts of the city council will bear fruit.

A few days of warm, sunshiny weather will put Clackamas county wheat fields in promising condition. Notwithstanding the reported shortages in some sections, there will be many thousands of bushels and pounds of fruit for sale in this part of Oregon when picking time comes.

This is pioneer week, and many of Oregon's pioneer men and women will be gathered at the annual pioneer reunion tomorrow in Portland. Many will be present, who never before were present at these festive occasions. While many of the pioneers are passing away, it also is true that there are many pioneers in the Oregon hills, who have not attended pioneer reunions. However, this does not detract from the honor due them as state founders.

Oregon City is receiving recognition in Masonic circles—two of her citizens having been elected to important positions in the Royal Arch grand chapter.

The Stephens Addition baseball team have withdrawn from the amateur league, and will no more play on the Willamette field. The defeat that Oregon City gave them was too much for their faint hearts.
