Leighton Kelly returned to the Clackamas hatchery Saturday, after spending a delightful outing at the state salmon hatchery on the upper Clackamas. He stated that Superintendent Crumbley had racks in position in three different places in the river, and would be ready to take salmon for the eggs in a couple of weeks. The hatchery plant has been put in excellent condition, and present indications are favorable for a good catch. Fish Warden VanDusen arrived at the hatchery on the evening before Mr. Kelly left, and expressed great satisfaction at the preparations

Councilman C. G. Huntley and Attorney J. E. Hedges returned Saturday from Malheur county, where they inspected a clean-up of the Golden Eagle mine, 30 miles south of Baker City. Both are prominent stockholders in the milling plant and mine, and brought home about $150 in retorted amalgam gold, a part of the clean-up made from the battery while they were at the mine. The mill had been running on ore averaging $14 to the ton, and the local stockholders here are well pleased with their investment.

The Portland Flouring Mills Company is pushing the construction of the new flume to carry water from the basin to the brick mill. The old flume had been in place for about 12 years, and was badly decayed. The timbers now being placed in the flume are given a chemical treatment, and it is expected that the lumber thus treated will last for a quarter of a century. Other improvements are being made around the mills, and under the management of R. C. Ganong, the mills have earned a wide reputation for excellent flour.

Moses Spicer, a county charge, and a pioneer of the early 50s, died at the La Stell lodging house on Main street last Friday evening from pneumonia and heart trouble complications. He was over 70 years old and unmarried. He at one time had a homestead near the Vaughan place, and later located near Willout Springs, selling his claim there a few years ago. He had no relatives, at least not in this country. The funeral took place Saturday afternoon from Shank & Bissell's undertaking parlors. Spicer was an unique character, generous, and was a noted fiddler, whose fame extended over two counties. He had played for dances from away back in the pioneer days, and he and his violin were welcome visitors at many homes, and his services were in demand on festal occasions. He did not play by note, but he had a way of putting a lively originality in his instrument that charmed his hearers and caused the dancers to move with graceful rhythm. The kindly hearted old man will be missed by many old friends.
