Bréeders Who Have a New Strain of the Great American Breed.

The next new variety of fowls to be introduced to public notice is the Pen-Silver Penciled and Partridge Penciled. tridge Penciled some years ago, but I think discontinued breeding them, and later Dr. W. C. Crocker of Foxboro, It is indorsed by both the religious Mass., started both varieties, Silver and secular tress. The Chicago Adand Partridge Penciled, We met Mr. vance says: "A perusal of the took and Crocker at Boston one year ago and his persistent inquiries as to our method of producing and breeding, the penciling and color in the Penciled Wyandottes. Then he inquired if we had single combs in each color, they were sent to Mr. Crocker to be mated to the birds he already had, and we understand he has made great improvement by using these single combed sports from both varieties of Penciled Wyandottes, they having bred true to single comb, clean legs and nicely penciled plumage.

"But there are others" who have started and are breeding them, one of these being Mr. John Lowe of Swansea, Mass. Mr. Lowe is also originating a strain of each variety and hardly knows which he admires most, the Silver Penciled or Partridge Penciled. But this is not all. Mr. R. G. Buffinton of Fall River, Mass., of whom it has been said, "A breeder who breeds Buff-in-ton lets," is also originating the Partridge Penciled variety and has recently informed me that he has just purchased all of Dr. N. B. Aldrich's Partridge Penciled Rocks, besides a lot of other birds of this variety from other breeders. So it would seem that Massachusetts is a veritable hotbed in the production of these new, Penciled Rocks. The writer has three pullets and a cockerel or two of these single combed sports in the Partridge Perciled variety, which, if mated together, might produce single combed results only, and if we conclude to do this we will be "in it," too, but we will do nothing of the sort. The two varieties of Penciled Wyandottes keep us busy thinking, and a rose comb suits our taste better than a single comb. There is a probability that "there are others" in different parts of the world who are breeding these new Penciled Plymouth Rocks besides estate are hereby notified to present the same to those mentioned above. These, howme, properly verified, as by law required at my ever, are all that I have heard of thus far. I do not doubt but that these two varieties will be brought to a very high standard of perfection, or at least they will soon be brought up to an equality with the Partridge Cochin and Dark Brahma in color and markings. as the Partridge Cochin and Dark Brahma can be used in improving these new varieties. Brooder Building and Roosting Houses on a Massachusetts Plant.

In Reliable Poultry Journal George H. Pollard has an illustrated article reciting what he saw on a visit to the chicken producing section round about Hingham, Mass. One of the places be visited was that of Farrar Bros. Part of what Mr. Pollard says of this plant, together with two pictures, follow:

On a former occasion we spoke of houses 6 by 8 feet, in which the Farrar Bros. carried 50 chickens to a market age and to weights which would run from 7 to 11 pounds each. We now show a picture of several of these houses and of the large brooder building 200 by 10 feet, in which are used individual brooders. There are also on this plant two other brooder buildings, one of which is 130 feet in length, with the overhead system of piped hovers, the other, somewhat greater in length, being equipped merely with a bank of pipes on the rear wall of the house. The chickens come from the piped brooder to this second building, the heat from the bank of pipes serving to keep the building at a suitable temperature for their comfort. In the big 200 foot building, where they are started in individual brooders, they are kept until such a time as the brooders are outgrown, when the brooders are removed and the chickens are given the whole pen space.

From this building, which is shown in the illustration, together with these houses of 6 by 8 feet, the whole being on a tract of land not exceeding threequarters of an acre, for the accommodation of buildings, walks and pens, there has been marketed every year for the last seven years an average of over 2,000 chickens, weighing from five to ten pounds each. This has been done in every one of these years without intermission and without any other care of the soil than that which comes from the annual plowing and seeding with rye. That this success is possible season after season is one of the remarkable facts which the writer has discovered in poultry culture.

Hatching and Raising Poults.

One should be very careful in setting turkey hens, as they are of a wild leave the two varieties in the same taking the nest eggs out and putting the bottom of the nest firm and solid the shape of the hen. If the hen is inclined to be irritable, it is best to leave her alone, as she may get excited and trample on the poults. I have successfully used incubators for hatching turkey eggs, but when it comes to putting the poults in the brooders it is another matter. It is all right to batch them in an incubator if one has hens to which he can give the young poults to be raised. I never feed my young turkeys until they are 24 to 36 hours old. They are first given grit, then some oatmeal or groats. I use very little soft food. When giving soft food, it is best to mix it with sweet milk, and give only what they will eat up at one meal, as turkeys should never have sour food.
