lar breed, and if they are found suitable, to improve his present herd of that stock, he will make some purchases.—Roseburg Review.

A mysterious hold-up man has been operating on the Slaven road in the vicinity of Oswego. With a fierce looking revolver, he terrorized women and children, and made a practice of robbing farmers along the road in the afternoons. Among the people who have been held up and relieved of small quantities of coin by this brigand are Robert Bieble and John Sagar and mother, of Stafford and Eli Rock. The bold burglar is reported to be sudden and decisive in his operations.

S. A. D. Hungate, the well known Molalla surveyor, has filed a plat of the Molalla river in the county clerk's office, claiming the use of the stream for logging and wood purposes in accordance with an act of the last legislature, he to make the required improvements, so that the stream will be navigable for the purposes intended. Under the provisions of this law the claimant and his successors have control of the stream for the purposes intended, after making the specified improvements.

The Grant's Pass Mining Journal says that Mrs. Diercke's concert on last Saturday evening was a financial as well as a musical success, and speaks well for the music lovers of Grant's Pass. The total receipts were $108, and after paying all expenses $10 was donated for public school uses. In speaking of Mrs. Diercke's playing this paper further said: It was certainly marvelous in the display of perfect technique and depth of musical conception and feeling. Her first number was the "Sonata Appassionata" by Beethoven, and in this grandest of Beethoven's sonatas the harmony was exquisite. The theme was carried out into infinite variations, yet it rang out clear and telling through it all. In her second group the "Music Box," by Lidlow, was perhaps the most popular with the audience, as it met with a general outburst of applause. It was certainly well executed and perfect in its imitation of a music box. Similar compliments also were made for the other numbers. The Chopin group of four numbers, she played with such a daintiness and delicacy that one could almost imagine that fairy fingers were dancing over the keys. Chopin once said that his waltzes were only for a countess to play, and Mrs. Diercke should certainly be ranked among the members of Chopin's royalty. Mrs. Diercke is certainly a very talented musician, and in coming years great things may be expected of her.
