At the trial of Dalton in Portland this week for the murder of Morrow, E. E. G. Seal, of Oregon City, testified as to the murderer's previous good character.

He stated that Dalton was in his employ for six or eight weeks ending in August. He said that after he had laid him off, he was sorry, as he did his work well. He trusted him with money matters and found him reliable. Seal also stated that when work was slack with him Dalton worked for others, and for a short time in the paper mills. Dalton gave Mrs. Seal an order on the paper mills in payment for his board, saying that he was a stranger there. The witness said this was more than others did. Mr. George, of Salem, testified that Dalton worked at his restaurant during the month of September as second cook. Dalton was pleasant and agreeable, and Mr. George saw nothing out of the way with him. He was a law abiding citizen so far as he was aware. Dalton was found guilty of murder in the first degree.
