

Matchless Dress Goods

And we say matchless with a double meaning—matchless in beauty as well as in price. We cannot claim a patent on beautiful dress materials—the markets of the world are open to all—nor can we alone quote low prices; but, considering styles, qualities and prices as a unit, we doubt if the equal can be found in the city of Portland, or the Great Northwest.

DRESS GOODS

Of Foreign and American manufacture, including every shade, make and weave, in black and colors, will be placed on sale at reduced prices.

Dee Wright expects to leave for Idaho today or tomorrow for Idaho, where he will do the packing for Rand's surveying party. He goes several days ahead of the party to move the horses from Bonner's Ferry to Pen de Orielle. Mr. Wright has just finished up the work of slashing 100 acres of brush on the farm of Nathan Moody and W. O. Vaughan.

Mrs. J. W. Moffatt, of Oregon City, is spending a few days with her sisters, the Misses Gray at 575 East Ash street. Miss Ethel Hoos, of Oregon City, is visiting with East Side friends and relatives. Adolph Willey, of Union avenue, has sold his harness shop to Fred Green, recently from Missouri.—Portland East Side Herald.

E. H. Harriman, the railway magnate, accompanied by Mrs. Harriman, the Misses Harriman and other members of the party, passed through the city Monday in his private train on his way to Portland. A brief stop was made at the depot, and it is said that Ed Fields extended an invitation to the party to visit Canemah park.

Mrs. Eva Emery Dye, of Oregon, is in Topeka, examining the Indian office manuscripts of General William Clark, superintendent of Indian Affairs at St. Louis, in the library of the State Historical Society. She is engaged in an investigation of material relating to the Lewis and Clark expedition, which she proposes to embody in a historical work. Her two volumes, "McLoughlin and Old Oregon," and the "Stories of Oregon," have run through several editions. Mrs. Dye has met two former friends in Topeka, W. H. Cowles, who was a classmate at Oberlin, and Professor W. H. Harshberger, of Washburn College.

Walter Wyland, formerly well known in Clackamas county was arrested in Portland last Friday for resisting an officer, and held under $500 bonds. It appears that Officer Carpenter was taking a man to jail by the name of Riggs, and Wyland informed the officer that if he took his prisoner to jail, that he also would have to take him. Wyland called to a rapidly gathering crowd to help him, and as a result the policeman had to let his prisoner go.

Dee Wright brought in a specimen block of rare pine Monday, that grew on the farm of W. O. Vaughan at Molalla. The bark and wood very much resemble the white fir and is resinous to an unusual degree. On the other hand, the leaves resemble those of the pine, having the long pine needles so common to the pine family. There is reported to be two or three trees of this variety growing on the Vaughan place. Mr. Wright sent the block of wood and accompanying pine needles to a timber sharp in Portland, who had expressed a desire to analyze the rare botanical specimen.

Mrs. Ruth C. Leavitt, wife of Dr. J. J. Leavitt, member of the Clackamas County Board of Pension Examiners, died at Molalla last Saturday. She was born at West Fairlee, Orange county, Vermont, December 8th, 1843. On October 5th, 1868, she was married to Dr. J. J. Leavitt at Sparta, Wis. Shortly after their marriage they came to Oregon and lived at Jefferson, Marion county for four years, but have been residents of Molalla since 1900. Besides her husband, Mrs. Leavitt left two children, Charles H. Leavitt, of Portland, and Miss Mattie B. Leavitt, of Molalla. The funeral took place Monday at the Dart cemetery, and was largely attended.

H. M. Riebhoff, of Stone, brought in 250 pounds of butter from the new Clear Creek creamery last Monday, which was supplied to local grocers. The new creamery is making a good article of butter, and is getting things fairly in working order. One of the greatest drawbacks at present, is the fact, that many of the farmers supplying the milk routes have been unable to secure cream separators, on account of a delayed shipment, which has failed to arrive in Portland. The creamery is to be operated on the cooperative plan, something like the Logan cheese factory. Milk producers will be allowed full value for their butter fat when the product is sold.

The Union Veterans Union, also will hold memorial services in the cemetery on Decoration day, separate from the Meade Post exercises. The members of John Gibbon Post will participate in the Union Veteran Union services, as its individual members also belong to the latter organization. There is no ill-feeling between the various Grand Army organizations, but the two orders just mentioned preferred using the Union Veteran Union ritualistic services to accepting the Meade Post invitation to participate in its exercises. The Union Veterans Union will drive out to the cemetery in carriages, instead of walking as they did last year.

Some people wonder if Mount Hood was ever a live volcano. Indian legend says that it was. E. C. Greenman, the well known pioneer, states that only a few years ago he heard two different Indians tell the story of the time when Mount Hood belched forth fire, ashes and rock. The story had been handed down among the tribes from generation to generation, and these old Indians could point out physical marks on the face of the country alleged to have been made by the eruption of Mount Hood. One of the Indians repeated the story as handed down to him by his forefathers, which was to the effect that the ashes from the Mount Hood volcano covered the ground for a depth of six inches within four miles of Oregon City. However, it is not now believed that there is any danger of Mount Hood exploding until after the June election.

A dispatch from Sumpter states that J. W. Noble, of Oregon City, with his mine foreman, P. G. Wells, returned from their Paul Krueger group during the week, after a trip through deep snow a portion of the way. They put a force of men to driving a tunnel on the Paul Krueger claim. This, so far as opened shows up well. Surface work was done elsewhere, as the company owns five claims, embodying nine ledges. Mr. Noble stated yesterday that it was their purpose to install a small small air compressor soon and operate by means of a power drill during the coming summer. All work will be devoted to opening up several ledges. All that has been done is very encouraging. The properties are across the divide between Wind and Pole creeks, where but little work has been done so far, but is near the big Cracker creek properties found in the ledges this side of the Elkhorn range.

The Parkplace school will have graduating exercises on June 6th, when four from the 10th grade will receive diplomas as follows: Victorine Wilson, Alvah Witzig, Agnes Reiling, Charles Childs.

It has been understood for some time that H. D. Wilcox was not a candidate for re-election to the position of city superintendent of schools. Professor T. J. Gary, principal of the West Oregon City school, is prominently mentioned for the place.

Sol Garde has negotiated for a strip of the Chase property as the rear of the Major Charman residence with a view of moving the dwelling to the new purchase, which would then face the suspension bridge on Seventh. It will be necessary to move the dwelling off the recently acquired property to make room for the proposed new brick.
