Farewell, deat, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn.
We shall used to part, no, never
On the Resurrection mons.
Though thy darling form lies sleeping
In the cold and slient tomb.
Thou shall have a glorious waking
When the blessed Lord doth come.

Peaceful he thy silent slumber:
Peaceful in the grave so low:
Then no more will join our number,
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our sorrows know.
Yet, again we hope to most thee
When the day of life is field,
And in Heaven, with joy to greet thee
Where no farewell teats are shed.
