A GIRL WHO KNEW MORE THAN SIX MEN

(Original)

A stagecoach was standing before the express office in the town of R. in Arizona. Presently a bank messenger brought out an iron bound box and placed it under the driver's feet.

An hour later, while he was feeling very downcast at the prospect of reporting the loss, blaming himself for his haste in throwing out the box, and the company for risking so much money without a guard, half a dozen men stepped into the road before him.
