A Trip Through Eastern Oregon.

Having had the pleasure of working and traveiling over a good share of East-ern Oregon, I take my pencil in hand to tell my story to the readers of the Cour-ier, which I hope will be of some interest to then Leavin Wilhoit October 2, 1901, and mounted on the back of a sturdy bronco headed for Oregon City,25 miles away. reached this flourishing town in good season andfound every branch of commerce to be thriving. I then took a pleasant ride on the electric car down to the enterprising city of Portland, of which I took a short note and adjourned to the Union depot. I next took an O. R. N train for Baker City. After being comfortably seated I took a prepout of the window at the smiling verdure of the lower Willamette valley. The gentle dairy cows could be seen cropping this earthly treasure for miles around a few miles farther on brought us fairly in to the logging camps of the Upper Co-lumbia. Darkness had now drawn the curtain and closed my observations for the night. I settled myself in an easy chair and prepared for the night ride At 12:40 a. oc. we arrived at The Dalles.

The Delles is situated on south bank of Columbia river, 88 miles from Portisud, and is the principle traveling post of Sherman and Waseo counties. Daybreak found us a few miles beyond Umatilla rolling leisurely through East ern Oregon at the rate of 35 miles per bour, and on looking out of my window how different was the scene that was presented to my view to that of the evening before. On every hand as far as the eye could reach nothing was to be seen but the rolling plains dotted with bunch grass and sage brush to greet the eye of the weary traveler. Now and then a solitary sheep berder could be seen pescetully smoking while guarding his flock, where the sneaking coyote and the timid jack rabbit scampered away. Occassionally a group of cowboys could be seen resting their leg over the saddle poniel taking the world easy, and now and then one would gallop away after some troublesome critter bands of the celebrated bunch grass horses that were seen scurrying in all directions as the train rattled by. The scenery on that brown October morning was magnificent and unsurpassed, and one long to be rem mbered by the writer. Ear away to the west in the cool marning air were the Cascade mountains with their snow capped summits looming up against the sky in all their beauty and granduer.

A head of us to the East were the Blue mountains in like beauty at 6:20 a. m. We arrive at Pendleton, which is the county seat of Umatilla county, and is squarely in the farming section of this great inland empire. We stop ed there for about 20 minutes and we took a walk around the town Everything showed a look of general prosperity from all directions large six, eight and ten horse wheat teams could be seen hauling for the warehouses, which were all ready full. Freight trains standing on side tracks ready to move. Farmers were banking their grain by the r ad side. This showed that the crop of the past year had been good. The conduc-tor informed me that it was what railroad men called, a wheat blockade.

For an hour and a half we wound our way up he Umatilla river through the Warm Spring Reservation, the red man's wickeup pitched by the road side with the blue smoke curling through the apertue in the top and a kloochman with a pappoose in her arms, adorning the entrance and presented a subject for the novelist and a sketch for the artist's

Ab u 7:50 a.m found usslowly climbing the Blue mountains and at 9:20 a m. we arrived at Meecham, on the sum-mit, where we stopped for breakfast. A fast ride of an hour brought us down to the beautiful city of La Grande, which is situated at the head of the Grande Ronde valley. Here a sugar factory was established, and the industry seem d to be thriving as the whole valley was a waving mass of sugar beets. For two hours we wound our way among the sand hills till we arrived at Baker

Oity, reaching this pace at 12:20 p. m. Haker City is the county seat of Baker county, and is situated on the south bank of Powder river. It is the base of supplies for all the mining sections of Eastern Oregon and Idaho. At 4:30 p. m. I took a Sumpter valley train for Sumpter and arrived there at

A husband, daughter, mother, several brothers and sisters survive her. Born and lived to womanhood under the same roof-married in 1898 to Conrad Prester and made their home in Oregon City, and about two years ago they moved to their farm Last summer they moved to Southern Oregon for the benefit of Mrs. Priester's health, which did not improve, and they returned a short time ago to the old home and relatives. The procession that followed the remains to their final resting place was almost onehalf mile long, and the concourse that met to pay respects at the last sad rites showed the great esteem in which they held her as a friend.
