The Courier will have a little something to say next week in regard to the manner in which the sheriff's office is conducted, and will compare the expenses of running the office under the present regime with the "old Democratic style."

The Junior Christian Endeavor will hold a social session at the Baptist church this evening at 7:30 o'clock. A delightful programme will be rendered and a silver offering taken. The programme is entirely under the control of the Juniors.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Knowland returned on Saturday last to their old home in California. Business affairs in that state compelled Mr. Knowland to drop his lucrative patronage here in the tailoring trade. The friends he formed in the brief breathing spell between long hours of unremitting work will ever remember him.

The sermons at the Congregational church next Sunday morning and evening will be in line with the week of prayer services. The theme at 10:30 a. m. will be "The Father's Constant Readiness to Hear and Answer." In addition to the usual musical numbers, Charles Blum will sing Brackett's "Around The Great White Throne."

If you have an item of news that the general public is interested in, whether it be of a personal, local, religious or sensational nature, we will feel deeply grateful if you will hand it into this office for publication. We are here to print all the news all the time, and it is only by the help of our friends that we will be able to do so.

At St. Paul's Episcopal church, the Rev. P. K. Hammond, rector, services will be held next Sunday as follows: Holy Communion at 8 a. m.; Sunday school at 10; morning prayer at 11; evening at 5 p. m. At the morning service at 11 the subject of the sermon will be "The Star of the Epiphany," and at 5 o'clock "The Sons of January." Miss Mary Conyers will sing an offertory solo at this service.

The annual meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church was held on Wednesday afternoon of this week. Mrs. E. S. Bollinger entertained the society, and the church parlors were appropriately decorated for the occasion. The society had a successful year, and begins the new year with an accession of ten new members. More aggressive work in all places, where aid is needed, is being planned. Mesdames M. A. Thomas, C. O. Albright and F. F. White were appointed a committee to arrange for a social meeting of the society in the church on the third Wednesday afternoon of January. The officers elected are: Mrs. J. M. Mark, president; Mrs. M. A. Stevens, secretary; Mrs. O. H. Caulfield, treasurer.

Administration of the Judicial Function.

Mankind is Honored by a Just Judge. Wisdom of Tempering Justice With Mercy—Statesmen Who by Their Works Have Raised Enduring Monuments to Themselves—Why the Name of Jefferson Should Be Perpetuated—Naming Children For Living Men.

[Copyright, 1902, by Champ Clark.] A just judge is an honor to the human race. An unjust judge is a scourge to his kind. Of all the Englishmen that ever lived with whose names history concerns herself Jeffereys, the wicked and brutal judge, is the most thoroughly detested.

Justice tempered with mercy is the ideal administration of the judicial function. It appeals to the heart.

Judge Rogers of the United States court for the western district of Arkansas served in congress many years, where he built up a splendid reputation as a statesman, patriot and filibuster. Indeed, he fairly rivaled "Buck" Kilgore of Texas in fertility of resources and in audacity of execution when it came to harassing Speaker Thomas Brackett Reed with filibustering tactics. It is rather a striking coincidence that those two brilliant and dashing parliamentary guerrilla chieftains should graduate out of congress on to the federal bench, but such is the truth of history. His honor Constantine Buckley Kilgore is in his grave. Let us hope that "after life's fitful fever he sleeps well." Judge Rogers has not only had a flourishing city named for him—an everlasting monument—but, in prize ring parlance, he appears to be in "the pink of condition," both mentally and physically.

Humane Act of a Judge.

Not long since while lecturing at the Fort Smith Chautauqua I noticed in a local paper the following anecdote, which deserves the widest circulation: "Yesterday Judge Rogers added another act to the register of his humanity, and, while such things with him are common, his last concession has excited more than ordinary favorable comment.

"While holding court in Texarkana he sentenced Ike Williams to the jail here for 90 days and imposed a fine of $100. Yesterday Colonel Du Val was handed a letter received by Williams from his brother saying that one of Ike's little ones was at the point of death. Colonel Du Val brought the matter to the attention of Judge Rogers, who held a short consultation with District Attorney Barnes, after which Williams was released unconditionally that he might go to the bed of his sick child.

"It was an act of humanity for which Judge Rogers deserves great credit," was the comment of Colonel Du Val as he related the story.

One of the most pleasant recollections of my long career as a prosecuting officer is that while I convicted 70 persons of felonies and nearly a thousand of misdemeanors I let off with a fine or jail sentence 20 young men charged with their first offense whom I could have sent to the penitentiary. Twenty-five of them are useful citizens. The twenty-sixth was incorrigible, and my successor in office sent him to state prison.

Enduring Monuments to Statesmen.

One of the finest and best known poems of Horace begins with the famous line

Exegi monumentum aere perennius, which being freely translated means, "I have reared for myself a monument more lasting than brass." His proud boast was true. He rendered his name immortal. Marble and bronze will perish at last. The most enduring monument a man can have in this country perhaps is to have a county or city or town named for him. Men may come and men may go, but these go on forever, as a rule increasing in importance with the lapse of years. We are much given to fixing the names of popular favorites upon counties, towns, townships and schoolhouses. Only one American worthy, Washington, has a state named for him. There was once an ephemeral state of Franklin where Tennessee now is. Unless it is literally true that republics are ungrateful, the state which is to be made one day out of the Indian Territory will be called Jefferson. He certainly deserves such a monument, and this is the last chance to give it to him, as the Indian Territory is the only remnant of the magnificent domain which he added to the Union and which made us a veritable world power. The poet says of Jefferson and the Louisiana territory:

His name is written on the mountain; His memory sparkles o'er the fountain. The meaneast rill, the mightiest river, Bolls mingling with his fame forever.

That is poetic license. The idea should be realized by naming a great state for him, the only redheaded president we ever had. Old John Adams spoke the simple truth of Jefferson when he said, "He is cunning with his pen." That was, however, only half the truth, for we may truly say of him what Frederick the Great said of his illustrious ancestor, the great elector, "This man did great things." Roscoe Conkling in nominating General Grant at Chicago for a third term voiced the same idea when he said of him, "His fame rests not alone upon things written and upon things spoken, but upon the arduous greatness of things done." That sentence likewise may be applied to Jefferson without exaggeration or bad taste.

But I did not start out to write an
