Stop Coughing

What are you thinking about to let that cough hang on like that? That's nature's danger signal. That's the way consumption starts. That's the way the voice is weakened.

Huntley's White Pine Balsam

cuts the phlegm—alays the irritation—stops the cough—heals the inflamed throat—clears the voice. We guarantee it to do these things. Your money back if it doesn't. We are getting dozens of testimonials every day for it. Cure your cold today with it. Price 25c. Three times as much for 50c.

Obliging.

We are constantly striving to be obliging—we want to make this the most pleasant store you visit—Portland or Oregon City. Every clerk is working for this purpose. Don't be afraid of putting us to trouble—we are looking for this kind of trouble. We would be glad to have your suggestions, too. Most of all, remember that nothing gives us so much pleasure as righting a wrong. If you have a grievance, tell us, and see how quickly and cheerfully we will make it right.

C. F. Nixen, a prominent farmer, died at his home in Oswego, Thursday morning of last week, after a short illness. He was a well known and honorable citizen and leaves a large family of children to mourn his demise. The funeral was held Saturday at the Methodist church in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives.

The 2-year-old child of K. H. Gabbert, former city editor of the Oregon City Courier, was burned to death last Saturday at St. Helens. The mother had left the child in the kitchen for a few minutes, when it got too near the stove and its clothing caught fire. The remains were taken to Eugene Monday for burial.

Mrs. Thornton, who has been running a boarding house on Main street, opposite the woolen mill, removed the first of the week to Sellwood, where she has rented the Sellwood hotel and will operate a first-class house. Her successors are Mesdames Thomas and Bailey, who took charge when the old firm went out of business. The name of the house will be the same, "New England Home."

Annually, for years, many wagonloads of earth have been dumped through the roadbed of planking into the hollow on Main street, near the Y. M. C. A. building. If the city had authorized the confining of the waste material by wooden or stone walls, by this time that part of the street would have been filled up level, as the annual washing away of a large part of the fill into the Willamette would have been prevented.

BAD MARKSMANSHIP.

PREVENTS A TRAGEDY AT SANDY.

W. H. Hall Goes Gunning for Silas Hedges.

Bad marksmanship averted a tragedy at Sandy last Friday. If W. H. Hall had been a dead shot he would probably now be in the county jail with a murder charge hanging over his head. He is not a good shot, however, and is out on $1500 bail, with a charge of shooting at with the intent to kill instead.

Hall recently instituted suit for divorce in the Clackamas county circuit court, against his wife, Laura Hall. In his pleadings he alleged that his wife was not faithful to him. He claimed that he had seen his wife in company with a man named Hedges through the assistance of a medium at a distance of 40 miles. He attempted to produce other evidence showing that she was not a dutiful wife. On the other hand the wife brought testimony to show that she was a good and faithful woman. A whole day was consumed in hearing the trial and the case was thrown out of court. This was about two weeks ago.

After the trial both Hall and Hedges remained in Oregon City for a few days and then departed for their homes near Salmon. At Sandy last Friday, Hedges went into the general merchandise store, and a little later was followed by Hall. Just as soon as Hall saw the man, whom he claimed had ruined his home, he opened fire on him with a big revolver. Hedges dodged behind a sack of flour and managed to make his escape. Hall kept on firing till his revolver was emptied. No one was hurt, though the woodwork in the store was considerably splintered up.

Hall was arrested and brought to Oregon City for trial Monday. On the examining trial he was held on a $1500 bond to await the term of the circuit court in April. A prominent Portland lumber company went on the bond and Hall is now at liberty.

Some of Hall's friends claim that he is insane.

TWENTY GRAINS

OF MORPHINE ENABLED WILLIAM WARNER TO SHUFFLE OFF.

A Friday's Suicide in Oregon City.

William Warner dropped dead at the rear entrance to Phillip Roos' saloon, on the corner of Main and Seventh streets last Friday morning at half past nine o'clock. Twenty grains of morphine had enabled Warner to shuffle off this mortal coil.

The man came to Oregon City Thursday afternoon and claimed to be looking for employment. William Teats, who lives a few miles south of Oregon City, near Maple Lane, offered the man work on his ranch, which he accepted, but on finding that he would have to walk a few miles Warner refused to go.

Thursday afternoon he went to Roos' saloon and left a bundle, saying that he would be back after it and would probably take a room for the night. He then disappeared and was not again seen until next morning. Friday morning Henry Roos was making the rounds of the house when he discovered that some one was occupying a room that was thought to be unoccupied. Rapping on the door young Roos was admitted. Warner was in bed and apparently ill. Roos asked him how he came to be there and Warner did not seem to be able to answer, but muttered something about a friend having given him the room. When questioned further the man threw himself upon the bed and began jumping up and down, apparently in great agony. He said that his throat burned badly and asked for a drink of water which was given him. Thinking the man needed some medical attention Henry Roos started down stairs with him. When he reached the bottom of the stairs he toppled over and before a physician arrived was dead.

Coroner R. L. Holman was promptly notified and the body was removed to the morgue. It developed at the coroner's inquest that when Teats offered the man a job he had turned to him and said: "You have saved my life" at the same time taking from a pocket a small paper of morphine and showing it to Mr. Teats. He then said: "I was just going to take that." Teats tried to take the drug from the man but could not do so, and left him thinking that he would soon be working on his farm. When Teats heard of the man's death he came to town and told his story to the coroner's jury.

The man's identity was discovered through Captain J. T. Gray, of Portland. He had in his pocket Captain Gray's name engraved on some aluminum checks. Thinking that Captain Gray might know the man he was communicated with. He immediately came to Oregon City and at once identified the body as that of William Warner, a deckhand, who had worked for him on a Yukon river steamer. He said that Warner was a first class hand and did not drink when he knew him. He said he got to know Warner very well on the Yukon and liked his work, so offered him a job in February. He thinks the man was waiting for February before calling on him.

After due deliberation the coroner's jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death through twenty grains of morphine administered by his own hand. The remains were buried in the potter's field Sunday.

The program of the lecturer filled up the remainder of the evening until 11:30, the last number of which, an essay by Mrs. B. Eithaupt should, on account of its excellence, have been given first. The floor was cleared, the stove removed, and the young folks began to dance, going home at five in the morning, to be home in time to "pail the cows."

On account of the continual growth of the grange in this county and the largeness of the crowd, all granges assembled, the question was brought up whether it would not be advisable to divide this county into two Pomona districts. Evidently something must be done.

The place for assembling three months hence was not fixed. Milwaukee grange expressed its desire to entertain Pomona in July.

A rising vote of thanks was given Harding grange for its generous hospitality, and all who were present must certainly agree that Harding honored itself.

Sixty-six took the fifth degree. The ceremony of initiation having been completed, the class, mostly composed of young folks, amused itself for half an hour in eating oranges, candies and cake. The drawback on this occasion, as in other parts of the meeting, was the inadequacy of the hall to the size of the crowd.
