WORLD'S GREATEST ROSE GARDEN.

Fifty Thousand Rose Trees, Covering Four Acres.

A million roses will bloom at once in the vast rose garden at the World's Fair. That is guessing, of course, but the foundation of the guess is this: Four acres are set to vigorous rose trees. Thirty of the largest exhibitors have sent their choicest stock and each will strive for first place in the judgement of the jury and people.

This vast rose garden with its 50,000 rose trees lies east of the great Palace of Agriculture. The warm eastern slope has been made more fertile than your garden or mine with rich compost, and it will be a sight worth traveling far to see when the glorious colors make bright the beds and fragrance spreads far beyond the boundaries that have now been set.

This rose garden, the planting of which was begun early in April, occupies one of the conspicuous sites in the city of Knowledge. The center of the garden is at the main entrance to the Palace of Agriculture, a grand structure 1,600 feet long and 500 feet deep. It is on a high elevation overlooking the group of main buildings of the exposition, and, looking to the northeast, the view of one of St. Louis' most attractive residence districts is spread out before the eye.

When the graders finished their work and turned the site over to the gardeners, every vestige of soil had been removed, and a broad expanse of sticky, yellow clay remained. Surely to the layman a most unfavorable location for a flower garden. But to the practical rose grower it was an ideal spot. The ground was platted with a series of eight collections, forming a great oval, 150 feet long and 100 feet wide, as the central picture. In the center of this oval is erected a statue of the goddess of flowers in heroic size. Flanking this oval on the north and south, are two great collections, triangular in form. Scores of other collections laid out in plots of ground in various shapes, but all conforming with the general harmony of the main picture have been provided.

Each collection, while separate and distinct in itself, forms a part of a great and artistic whole, and a belt of beautiful green lawn, from four to eight feet wide, surrounds each collection. Spacious gravel walks are provided throughout the entire four acres of roses and at various intersections beautiful fountains sending up streams of crystal water and cooling the atmosphere, are to be met. Seats to accommodate thousands of visitors have been provided, and the seats are so distributed as not to interfere with the trees passage through the gardens of the countless thousands who will revel in the glorious sight.

With the young plant firmly placed in its perfectly prepared bed, came April showers. The water percolated through the rich soil and was absorbed in the sandy loam. The strong and healthy young bushes sent their vigorous roots down through the soft earth and found secure lodgment in the clay that forms the foundation. Then no matter how hard the wind blew, they were not disturbed.

While the roots were developing unseen under the ground, there was evidence of their power in the vigorous growth above ground. The young shoots anxious for their freedom after the winter's captivity in the cramped cold frames and the packages in which they were shipped, grew by leaps and bounds. Springing up from the ground, the pink shoots were at first almost transparent, so delicate were they. Then they became browned by the sun and exposure and soon the little buds appeared and under the ministrations of the watchful gardeners, and the influence of the warm April sun, the young plants were allowed to bloom, but not until it was too late to greatly increase the number. Expansion was what the gardeners mostly wanted, and the wood growth of the rose tree is demanded this year more than the blossom.

Most of the 60,000 roses now planted are of the hardy or semi-hardy varieties, but many of the varieties that are not supposed to stand the rigors of a St. Louis winter are among the specimens shown in the mammoth world's fair garden. All during the summer months, and until the snow flies next fall, the rose trees will continue increasing in size, strength and beauty. The work of the gardeners like precautions to prevent the frost from interfering with the beautiful picture provided for visitors to the City of Knowledge. The entire four acres will be packed at the foot of the roots of each individual plant, and a top layer of straw will cover the beautiful rose garden in the winter as the waters cover the sea and the snow covers the ground. Then no matter how low the temperature may drop, or how strong the storm may blow, the spring of 1904 will witness the awakening of the greatest and most artistic exhibit of choice roses ever collected. The planting of this mammoth rose garden was done under the personal supervision of Joseph H. Harkinson, who under Frederic W. Taylor, chief of agriculture, has charge of this outdoor exhibit.

Spiritualist Campmeeting.

The annual campmeeting of the Clackamas County Spiritualist Society will be held at New Era from Saturday, July 4, to Monday, July 20, both dates inclusive. The program is now being arranged by President George Lazelle. Mae Hunt, the noted California medium, will be present. Charles F. Goode, D. M., will appear Sunday, July 5, and J. H. Lucas will be at New Era Sunday, July 12. The campmeeting will be conducted on about the same lines as in former years. At the camp hotel the rate will be $5 a week, $1 per day and 25 cents for a single meal. Campers' tents will be furnished by the association for 50 cents and $1 per week. The ground rent for those bringing tents will be 50 cents to $1 for the season. The admission will be 10 cents for each day, or 25 cents for the season, to defray expenses. All public lectures and séances will be free. The auditorium has a good stage and a seating capacity of 300, and a speaker's stand, and comfortable seats will be provided for open-air meetings.

A VISIT TO OREGON CITY.

Sights of Interest That Attract Tourist to Town by the Falls.

A busy man who has not been up to Oregon City for several years, accompanied a friend to that burg Saturday. He says he was astonished at the growth of the city and the evidences of prosperity seen on every hand and especially at the number of people on the streets, and the crowded condition of the cars, coming and going. He is a lover of flowers, and in climbing the bluff back of the city found a number which he has not before seen in bloom this season. Omitting the common plants and weeds at the base of the bluff, the many species of ferns from two or three inches to two or three feet and more in height, and avoiding the friendly poison which reached down from every crag and crevice, as if anxious to assist the climber, he found a large number of flowers, mostly small, some very tiny and rare, and many of which were unknown to him. Among them were the tiny wild roses, blossoms of wild strawberry and blackberry in profusion, yellow violets, field daisies, two varieties of dandelions, red sorrel and wood sorrel, with yellow flowers, several varieties of buttercup, white clover, several species of saxifrage, clinging in crevices and covering the rocks, a pretty orchid in many spots, and small plants, with pretty star-shaped, tiny flowers, somewhat resembling those of the forget-me-not, but having blue and white blossoms on the same stalk. Such a collection, to say nothing of the flowering shrubs, etc., well repaid the exertion of climbing the bluff.

The growth of the city can best be realized by viewing it from the top of this bluff, but the beauty of the falls of Willamette, which used to be the charm which enticed most people to make the climb, has departed. The big basin, on one side with a lot of boats floating therein, the canal on the other side, lined with paper and pulp factories, and the large generating station of the Portland General Electric Company, with a dam stretched across the river just above the falls, have combined to do away with about all there ever was of grandeur or beauty about them; in fact, it can hardly be said that there is a hole there any longer, and salmon to ascend over the rapids need feet as well as fins. The view from the suspension bridge is a little better, but the most naturally scenic of all is several men and boys fishing from the wharf at the foot of the incline, with a big pile of suckers, chubs and other coarse fish around them.

The notice, "Positively no admittance," posted over the entrances to the woolen mill, serves to remind the visitor that he should not leave Ore. City without looking through its greatest manufacturing plant, where some 250 men and women, girls and boys are employed. To one accustomed to stepping over "no admittance" notices and striking a match with which to light his cigar on notices of "no smoking allowed," there was no difficulty in gaining admittance, and a stroll through the departments on the three floors of the long building was an interesting journey. The noiseless machines carding the wool, the long spinning jennies—moving backward and forward as our grandmothers used to at the spinning-wheel, but doing the work of hundreds of such wheels—all served to keep the spectator in the weaving establishment on the ground floor. A host of looms also kept up an unceasing and infernal din and clatter, equalled only by the aggregation of typewriters in the reporters' room of a large newspaper. The sight of the whole made one think of days gone by, and the changes time has brought about since the farmer's wife carded the wool, spun the yarn and wove the clothing of her husband, herself and family. The work in such a factory is scarcely so trying to mind and body as that of the average stenographer, but it was pleasant to note that the majority of employees in every department were men and boys instead of women and girls.—Oregonian.

Sale of Spring Suits and Topcoats

We call your attention to the grandest collection of Tailor-made Suits and Topcoats for Spring ever shown in Portland, just opened up from The Royal Tailors, of Twelfth and Michigan Avenue, Chicago

1200 Spring Suits and 160 Silk-lined Topcoats

That were made to order for $25.00, $30.00, and $40.00, in all the latest shades and patterns, in Cheviots, Worsteds, Cassimeres, Tweeds, Homespuns, Coverts, Venetians, and Vicunas, Three and Four-button, Single and Double breasted styles, all cut by the Royal Tailors' Cutters with the new long, narrow lapel and one of the features in the swell Tailor-made Garments. Now, Strain's point is, his Clothing is all Tailor-made, bearing the labels of such tailors as Lamm & Co., the Royal Tailors, The Continental Tailors, The Dixie The International Tailors and hundreds of other famous makers of men's High Art Clothing to measure.

We sell you the real Tailor-made, Custom-made Article at one-half the price that the ready made clothier asks you for an article that he himself acknowledges to be inferior or NEARLY AS GOOD as

Tailor-made Clothing

Common sense will teach any one that a Suit Made to Order will wear longer, hold the shape better and look better than any ready-made suit will, because the Goods are superior, the linings Trimmings are superior, the workmanship is superior. They are shrunk and sponged, hand-made and hand-finished. That's the sort of suits and Topcoats Strain sells at $10.00

$10.00 Taylor-made Trousers, $3.50

That's a strong comparison of values, $10 trousers for $3.50, but we have the strongest kind of an argument behind it. We have exactly what we advertise. 800 pairs of pants just received from our Chicago buyer, picked up here and there from tailors who wanted cash worse than they wanted the pants. Not one pair of the lot that would not be a bargain at $7.50, and most of them worth $10 and $12.50. In new Spring stripes, made of best imported worsted, cut to fit, 800 pairs to pick from at Strain's $3.50

WE NEVER SHOWED SO FINE A LOT OF PANTS AS THIS BEFORE

Special—Cut this "ad" out and give to Strains' and buy what you want. When you pay your bill this advertisement will be worth ten per cent of your purchase
