The steamer Leona came in Sunday afternoon loaded to her limit with Portland excursionists. When she arrived here more than 200 passengers were waiting at the dock to return to Portland on the steamer. As none of the passengers got off however, it was impossible to take any more aboard, and the gang plank was not put out. One drunken man attempted to get aboard and fell into the water and came near drowning. He was fished out and put ashore to dry. He would be passengers kicked up a great hullabaloo but it did no good and the steamer left them at the dock.

Oregon City people are flocking to the seashore and the summer resorts as the weather begins to get warmer. Dozens of them are away at this season of the year enjoying a well-earned rest. Everybody ought to take a vacation of a week or more if he can afford it at some time during the summer. One will come back from a trip to the seashore, the mountains or the springs feeling much more like going about his daily toil than if he had remained at home. The cost is small and will be more than repaid by the surplus of energy one will have when he returns. There are plenty of nice spots where one may spend a week or so recreating within easy reach of Oregon City. We have in our own county a typical summer resort, the Wilhoit Springs. A number of Oregon City people will spend a week there this summer.

MOLALLA CATTLE NOT AFFLICTED.

So Says J. W. Thomas, Master of Molalla Grange.

J. W. Thomas, Master of the Molalla Grange, was in town Tuesday and gave out an interview to the effect that the cattle disease that was said to prevail in that section of the country was without foundation. He said that not a single herd of cattle in his section of the county was afflicted with a "mysterious" disease as has been published. He credits the origin of the report to parties who are jealous of the splendid butter, cream and beef for which the Molalla country is famed. The cattle of his country he says are better than average in health. On the other hand J. F. Hann, of Wilhoit Springs, a few miles beyond Molalla was in town Monday and reported a cattle disease in his neighborhood similar to the one described in the papers a few weeks ago from Molalla. He says that cattle are first attacked with swelling glands, followed by bleeding of the nose, dysentery and death.
