Keen Competition.

There will be keen competition between the different counties in this state, making county exhibits at the state fair this fall. There will be no less than eight counties competing for the different prizes, which will make the greatest show of agricultural and horticultural products ever seen in this state. Most of these exhibits will be taken to St. Louis in 1904 to advertise Oregon's resources, and we predict that Oregon will have the finest display she has ever made at any exposition.

Dragging Pains

2825 Keeley St., CHICAGO, ILL., Oct., 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Maudie Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

Hot Lake.

Where a River of Boiling Water Forever Flows.

One of the Great Wonders of the State of Oregon.

The state of Oregon has everything that can be found in any other state and a great many things which can be found nowhere else on this earth. So many things are bigger and better in Oregon than anywhere else. Hot Springs in Arkansas are famous for the world over. The sick and weary, the lame, the halt and the blind journey from every part of the globe to bathe in the hot water and hot mud of Hot Springs, Arkansas. Yet here in the state of Oregon we have Hot Springs that absolutely cast into the shade every other hot spring in the world. We print the following not as an advertisement but as a matter of general information.

What the famous Hot Springs of Arkansas are to the East, Hot Lake, Oregon, is to the West. Situated in the beautiful Grand Ronde Valley, surrounded by the magnificent Blue Mountains, on the line of the O. R. & N. railroad, 300 miles from Portland. For ages it has been known as the "big medicine" of the Indian. Flow, 2,200,000 gallons per day; temperature, boiling. It is the hottest spring known, being three times larger than the Arkansas Springs, and 60 degrees hotter.

The water is impregnated with mineral in such perfect solution that there is not a particle of precipitate. It is wonderfully curative in diseases of the stomach, bowels, kidney, liver, bladder, skin and blood; also in rheumatism, catarrh, neuralgia and other nervous troubles. The treatment consists in copious drinking of the water, hot mineral water, vapor and mud baths. The steam from the vapor bath comes from the natural heat of the spring. The mud bath is taken from the bottom of the lake where it has been mineralized for ages.

All baths are given by skilled attendants under the direct prescription of a regular physician who works in harmony with the medical profession. Diet prescribed when necessary.

Altitude, 3,000 feet. Climate, cool in summer, mild in winter. Sanitarium heated by the hot water from spring. Electric lighted. Barber shop.

UNCOMMON WISDOM.

Some Oregon City People Profit by Neighbors' Experience.

It is a wise man who profits by the experience of his friends and neighbors. Here is a chance to do it, and every man woman or child in Oregon City who knows the misery of a bad back, the nervousness and restlessness caused by kidney complaint or the annoyance of urinary disorders, will show uncommon wisdom to profit by this advice.

G. A. Parrish, the well-known Portland musician, who lives at 33 1/2 Grand Ave., says: "My first attack of kidney complaint consisted principally of dull aching pains across the loins. I paid little attention to it at first and it gradually grew worse. When I did anything which required exertion, or if I caught cold, I was sure to have backache in an acute form, I was feeling quite miserable some time ago and one evening while looking over the paper I noticed a convincing 'ad' relating to Doan's Kidney Pills, which persuaded me to purchase a box. The results I obtained from their use were satisfactory in every way."

Plenty more proof like this from Oregon City people. Call at C. G. Huntley's drug store and ask what his customers report.

Sold by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

The Need of It Becoming Greater and the Opportunities Better.

[Special Correspondence.]

The farmer's son must get the idea thoroughly rooted in his brain that the twentieth century is to be a century of education. It is to be the era of the trained man. Right alongside of this idea the farmer's son should plant another idea, and that is that if agriculture is to keep up with the procession the agriculturist must be a trained man. The farmer of the future must be thoroughly educated for his business.

The next question is, How shall he be trained? The means of agricultural education are so numerous and so valuable that there is no excuse for any who do not avail themselves of some of these means of training. Let me mention some of the opportunities that are offered to farmers' sons for getting an agricultural education.

First is the farm itself. This is the farmer's workshop, and it is and ever will be the best place for his education. It is here that he applies his theories and works out his experiments. Every day of his life he is at school to nature. He can get his information at first hand. But it is a strange fact that two different men, differently trained, will gain exceedingly varying degrees of knowledge from the same farm. This is simply because one has trained powers of observation; he knows how to mine knowledge. The other one is untrained; he does not know how to question nature; he cannot understand nature's answers to the questions he may ask. Let me point out those agencies that will give a young man such training that he can make the most of his farm as an educator as well as a money getter.

I would divide these agencies into two classes: First, those which are available to practically every farmer in the United States and which he can utilize to the very end of life. Among these is the agricultural press. Good farm papers exist in every state, and the half dozen leading agricultural papers in the country are of the highest practical value and literary merit. It is amazing how many farmers there are who do not take any farm papers and how many more there are who do not take a good farm paper. The second means is farmers' institutes. These exist today in practically every state in the Union, and their value has been proved over and over again. They are growing in influence and usefulness. And yet they are attended by only a fraction of the farmers of this country. But they are a tremendous means of education for the farmer's son. He will in them gain not only information, but inspiration. In the third place, there are home study courses, agricultural books, agricultural experiment station bulletins. Any young farmer who wants to study advanced agriculture can find an almost unending supply of good literature under these heads. There was a time when agricultural books were not of great value. Today there are dozens of first class agricultural books written by thoroughly trained and practical men and just as useful to the farmer as physicians' books are to the doctor. And, finally, in this class of agencies come the farmers' organizations, of which the grange is a type. The real work and purpose of the grange is education. All of its other purposes are subservient to this all embracing object. Our farmers are just beginning to learn what an educator it is. I am more and more impressed as the years go by with the tremendous possibilities of the grange in educating farmers' sons for their vocation.

But the farmer's son must also remember that the day has come when he can and should get quite a share of his training for agriculture in the schools. They are the second set of agencies. Every farmer's son who is to follow the vocation of his father should secure just as much schooling as he can possibly get. In the first place he ought to have the privilege when he is a mere lad of nature study in the rural school at home. When he has reached the age of thirteen or fourteen he should have, and in time will have, the chance to study the elementary principles of agriculture, also in his home school. Then, if he cannot go to college, but wishes to study agriculture a little further, he will have at the county seat of his county an agricultural high school, where he can take a high school course containing some high school subjects such as English and mathematics and, at the same time, get good, thorough instruction in science applied to the farm. If he cannot afford the time or money to take even this agricultural high school course, he can take advantage of the many special winter courses that are offered even now at every agricultural college in the United States.

But the farmer's son, if he is wise, will not content himself with schooling below that of the college. I do not mean to say that every farmer's son ought to go to an agricultural college, but it ought to be understood that it will probably pay him to go to the agricultural college. The chances are that it will pay him if he wants to go back to the farm, and if he wishes to enter the increasing ranks of those who desire to teach agriculture or to experiment in agriculture the thorough college course in agriculture is absolutely indispensable.
