Hundreds of Oregon City people are in the hop yards this week and will be there for two or three weeks more.

Evelin Califf and E. Krietz went up to Rainier last week to act as batters for the St. Helens team. They won two out of the three games.

Pete Frank, formerly an employee of the Willamette Pulp & Paper Co., is suffering from a malignant case of typhoid fever at his home at Green Point.

No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, summer complaint of any sort if you have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest.

Next Sunday being near the day when labor organizations are making special efforts to promote the interests of labor the pastor of the Congregational church will give an address on "The Bread and Butter Problem."

George Estee, president of the United Brotherhood of Railway Employees, addressed a meeting of Union men and railway employees at Redmen's hall Tuesday evening. A fair crowd was in attendance.

Sunday was bawdy's day at Canemah park, and a large crowd was in attendance from Portland. A ball game in the afternoon between Oregon City and All Stars of Portland, resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 13 to 3.

Mrs. J. M. Taylor died in Portland Sunday of paralysis. Mrs. Taylor was formerly a resident of this city and only removed to Portland a few months ago. The funeral was held at the residence in Portland Tuesday and the burial took place in River View cemetery.

Is it not about time that Oregon City merchants should shake the lethargy occasioned by the usual summer dullness from their feet and proceed to get ready for a heavy fall trade by planting their ads in the local papers? In this connection it might be well to add that the Courier still has some space to sell.

There have been eight babies born in the Redland community during the past four months. This is a pretty fair average for a country neighborhood. The latest additions to the population in that thriving community are a girl, born to the wife of Chas. Shumway, and a boy born to the wife of William Bonney.

J. A. Tufts received word on Tuesday morning that his brother William Tufts of White, Wisconsin, who has for several years been suffering with a bad case of chronic rheumatism had departed this life. Mr. William Tufts was a prominent citizen of White and was twice Sheriff of his home county, the county of Clark.

A nice summer outing is to go by the mountain trail from Detroit, on the railroad, to Breitenbush hot springs. The trail is good, packhorses making the trip in half a day, and the water, which is said to be unsurpassed to wash the whiskey out of "old soaks," is so hot one can drink it only in sips. Quite a settlement of shanties and tents was there this summer.

The habit of mountain tourists of writing or carving their names on blazed trees at camping points, suggest the question whether, at some future time, it will not be necessary, not to mention the convenience, for the government to establish registers, say, firmly bound blank books attached to a tree by chains in which travelers may eternalize their names.

Cloudless skies and balmy weather has characterized the opening days of September, and hop men and grain growers in the Willamette Valley are wearing broad smiles, and well they may, for their crops are better than an average and the prices of hops are higher than for years, and even grain is bringing satisfactory prices and the weather is helping their cause along.

The U. B. Sunday school held its picnic as announced at Canemah Park Wednesday, Sept. 2. The day was beautiful and there was a good attendance. A bountiful dinner was spread and a good program was rendered. Everybody pronounced it a grand success. The committee desires to thank Clarence Kiehl for the use of the grounds and J. H. Turney for the use of his piano.

As far as can be learned, the only successful attempt to climb Mount Jefferson has been that of S. S. Mohler, who accomplished the feat at the imminent risk of his life. The photographic pictures he took on the top of the pinnacle, which can be seen at the Charman drug store prove that he made the trip, and if there are hazardous spirits, who would like to try it possibly he might be induced to accompany them as guide.

J. Traxtle, who lives near Logan, brought to the Courier office on Wednesday morning a stalk of corn 15 feet high carrying two good ears of corn. Mr. Traxtle is making a specialty of raising corn for roasting ears and has made quite a success of the matter. He has twenty acres in garden this year and marketing all his stuff at Portland and says that he is making good money out of his garden truck. Who says that you can't raise corn in the Willamette Valley.

A full grown fig tree full of ripe fruit is the proud possession of Mary LaForest of this city. This is the only fig tree in the city, possibly the only one in Oregon bearing fruit, and it is cynosure for the admiring gaze of hundreds who pass her place every day. While figs are not altogether a tropical fruit, still that they should grow in the 46th degree of latitude seems remarkable, and they probably would not be grown in the same latitude in any other part of world not tempered by the warm breezes of an ocean current.

The Courier office was never in a better position to do good job work on short notice than it is today. Five hundred dollars has been spent for new machinery and new type. The office is being overhauled, the front room painted and papered and the mechanical department ceiling and painted and the outside of the building painted. During the months of June, July and August the Courier office turned out $1200 in job work, the largest amount of work ever turned out by any job office in Oregon City in a similar length of time. If you want good job work done quickly and in order bring it to the Courier office.

At the time of her death she was 44 years and two months of age. She is survived by a husband and two grown children, Guy Reddick and Miss Bura Reddick, both of whom live in this city. ## A Story And a Moral

A well-to-do rancher came into our store this week and ordered a gallon of asphaltum. After it was put up came the usual question:

"How much?"

$1.35.

"Why is that your regular price" he asked.

"Yes, $1.35 a gallon for asphaltum in small lots."

His face lengthened as he said:

"I only want a gallon to finish my job, but I bought 10 gallons in Portland the other day—bought it of one of the biggest paint houses there and they charged me $1.50 a gallon."

Further talk developed these facts:

He had needed a large order of Lead, Oil and Asphaltum. He naturally supposed that he could buy paint cheaper at one of the biggest paint houses in the biggest city of the Northwest, than he could at home; so he paid his expenses to Portland—paid 15c a gallon too much for his Asphaltum—5c a gallon too much for his Linseed Oil and 25c a hundred too much for his Lead and then on top of it all paid the freight to Oregon City.
