

CUPID IS WIDE AWAKE.

Wedding Bells Fill the Air with the Melody of Their Music.

WEISMANDEL-RIDER.

At the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. E. M. Waldron of 308 Fourth street, the marriage of Miss Martha L. Rider, of Oregon City, and Mr. J. E. Weismandel of Macksburg was solemnized Wednesday, June 16, at 1 o'clock. The parlor was most artistically decorated with Oregon grape, potted plants, roses, sweet peas and maiden hair ferns. After the wedding march played by Mrs. Osborn, the bride and groom stood beneath a beautiful arch of evergreen twined with pink and white roses tied with a large bow of cream satin ribbon, where the wedding ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. A. J. Montgomery of Portland, in the presence of about forty guests.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of cream albatross and carried a bouquet of white carnations. After congratulations, the guests repaired to the dining room, where a very dainty luncheon was served. The dining room was prettily decorated with festoons of evergreens, looped up with bunches of roses, white bouquets of roses, ferns, sweet peas and marguerites completed the decorations. Many useful and beautiful presents were received.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rider of Oregon City, and the groom a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Weismandel of Macksburg.

The young people have the best wishes of a host of friends who wish them much happiness. They will make their home at Macksburg.

CLARK-KNIGHT.

A pretty home wedding occurred on Thursday, June 16, at noon, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Knight, of Canby, when their daughter, M. Vesta was united in marriage to Delbert G. Clark, of Portland. Rev. Stratford, of the M. E. church, officiated. The twin sister of the bride, M. Veva, acted as bridesmaid and the groom was attended by Mr. Edward E. Brantel. While Miss Esther Knight, a cousin of the bride, softly played the wedding march, the bride and groom entered the parlor and took their places beneath an arch of ivy and orange blossoms, from which suspended a flo al bell.

The bride was charmingly attired in white silk organdie over white tulle, with ivory lace trimmings, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white La Marque roses. The bridesmaid was attired in white chiffon and carried a bouquet of La France roses. The groom was attired in the conventional black. The parlors were festooned with green and white ribbons and evergreens and bouquets of white roses in profusion. The color scheme of the dining room was pink and white, beautifully carried out in festoons of ribbons.

After the ceremony a sumptuous repast was served. Many elegant presents were received. Amid a shower of rice and congratulations the young couple left on the evening train for an extended trip through the East, and while there will visit the St. Louis Fair. They will be at home to their many friends in Portland after August 1.

WALDRON-KRAFFT.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Orce Waldron, two miles northeast of Oregon City on Crescent Hill, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Monday afternoon, June 20th, when their daughter, Miss Jennie, and Arthur T. Krafft were united in marriage.

The front rooms were handsomely decorated with roses and ferns; a beautiful floral bell composed of marguerites and orange blossoms, supported by a white arch twined with ivy, had been prepared, beneath which, at 5 o'clock, the bride, beautiful in a dainty costume of white silk organdie, carrying a bouquet of white lilies, attended by Miss Mary Mitchell as bridesmaid becomingly attired in pink beau de crepe, carrying pink roses and maiden hair ferns, and the groom attended by Clyde Waldron as best man, both in the customary black took their places, and in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends the ceremony was performed by Rev. E. S. Bollinger of the First Congregational church of Oregon City.

Congratulations were offered by those present. The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Mary Mitchell. The party then repaired to the dining room, where the combination of evergreens on the walls and table decorations of Crimson Rambler roses made a most pleasing effect. A dainty lunch was served, after which the newly married couple departed for Sellwood, Or., where they will reside and be at home to their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Krafft are most estimable young people, being well and favorably known; they go forth on life's journey amid the best wishes of a host of admiring friends.

June 22, at the Congregational manse, Oregon City, Mr. T. M. Cowan and Miss Rilla Secrist were united in the bonds of matrimony, Rev. E. S. Bollinger officiating. Mr. Cowan is a business man from Portland and the bride hails from Clark county, Washington. The happy couple will reside at Portland.

At the Congregational manse, June 16, L. M. Salle and Altha Ogden. E. S. Bollinger officiated.

Pioneer Day has aroused memories of "olden time" that have apparently lain dormant for a year. Stories of the dangers encountered in crossing the plains, reminiscences of the Indian wars, praises of the departed brave frontiersmen, all are heard recounted by those who took part in the stirring scenes of the '40's and '50's, and whom Father Time has kindly spared to see. Mingling with the pioneers on the streets, and listening to their tales of early adventure, one can almost imagine himself living under the conditions they describe so well.

A MONOPOLY IN ROOMS.

The Lewis and Clark accommodation bureau is striving to get a corner on apartment s during the 1903 Fair. They have already made about 700 contracts, and their aim is to secure not less than 5,000 rooms. The company will undoubtedly make a fortune out of the undertaking, but they also run a great risk, as either a big fire or a strike, that would tie up the fair, would leave them in a bad shape.

Oregon Pioneer's Reunion.

The following account of the Pioneer's Annual Reunion, which was held in Portland on Wednesday, the 22nd, is clipped from the Oregonian, of Thursday:

The history of the State of Oregon marched down Sixth street yesterday afternoon.

The parade of the pioneers was like the unrolling of a panorama, like turning the leaves of a musty record. Away up in the lead marched a sturdy old lady carrying a banner marked "1839." She was Mrs. N. A. Bird. By her side walked John Long, of Sanvies Island, a pioneer of 1837, too feeble to carry a banner, but marching in the parade just the same.

At the rear of the procession, behind the youngsters of 1859, the time limit for admittance to the association, slowly moved two automobiles. In the autos were members of a family which crossed the plain in ox-carts in 1848, while one member, Joseph Watt, came to Oregon in 1844. These pioneers were Werner Breyman, of Salem, and his wife; Mrs. B. H. Bowman, Mrs. J. M. Morton, Mrs. R. White, A. S. Watt, of Portland, all but Mr. Breyman being members of the Watt family. They had lived to see the change in vehicles for travel and pleasure from a cumbersome ox cart to an automobile, which, gently puffing steam, crept along behind the old timers' steps, but always ready to burst out into a speed that would have left even a runaway ox-team far in the dust. Never until yesterday were automobiles seen in a pioneer's parade. They were driven by J. B. Kelly and a chauffeur.

Without a serious hitch of any kind the parade was finished at the Armory doors, after half the city, so it seemed, had looked with reverence upon the old settlers as they marched by.

For an hour before parade time the veranda of the Hotel Portland, the court in front, and Sixth street outside, swarmed with pioneers, all talking, congratulating one another, and preparing for the parade, the great test of their remaining strength. And the old-timers, the men who were first, and their wives who had made their early homes livable seemed determined to show one another that they were still far from dead, so they put their best foot forward when the parade was called, and marched sturdily along.

Joseph Buchtel acted as grand marshal of the procession. The banner-bearers started from the court of the hotel, and as they passed out of the gateway those in waiting fell in behind the banners for their respective years. A number too feeble to endure the tire-some march were taken in carriages to the Armory. When fully lined up the parade extended from Yamhill street to Washington, and the cars had to wait until all was ready, and the procession, headed by four mounted policemen, a squad of 14 officers under Captain Moore and DeCaprio's band, marched north on Sixth street to Ankeny, where it turned, and going up Ankeny to Seventh, turned again and proceeded up Burnside street to Tenth, where it disbanded in front of the Armory.

By actual count taken on Burnside street, 525 pioneers marched in the parade.

Mayor Williams apparently forgot all about his 81 years, and marched in the 1853 ranks with a sivelier step than some much younger men. Ex-Governor Moody, Judge Blanchard, of Rainier, and other law-makers were also in line. One of the oldest was Andrew Wirt, of Skippoon, bent with the weight of 90 years. His wife, also a pioneer of the state, is one of the survivors of the Whitman massacre. A child at the time, she was carried off by an Indian and kept with the tribe for some time.

The Pioneers' parade ended at the Armory, where the formal afternoon programme took place in the dance hall, followed by the banquet in the larger drill hall below. While the first was in progress, evidences of the latter in the way of many young women in aprons who flittered in and out of the staid assemblage reminded the pioneers of the first the second and third generations had in store for them.

Mr. Moore's occasional address was excellent. He recalled many facts regarding early pioneers, principally those with whom he had come in contact. The leaders in all the movements which have helped toward the upbuilding of the state since the time of the establishment of provincial government here were called up by him, and those who are dead had their deeds recounted. He dwelt at length on the Civil War heroes, ending with the latter accomplishments in civilization of those who had come to a wilderness and built up a rich community.

When Mr. Moore came to the pioneer women his address took on a much stronger eulogistic tinge than it had had before. He told of the privations of the pioneer women, saying that these were particularly severe on the class of women who came across the plains. They were not so much hardy women as sensitive, and often cultured women. But they bore the privations bravely, raising their families, and Mr. Moore as the son of such a woman gave them unstinting praise.

The officers elected for the succeeding year are: President, W. F. Wright, 1852, of Union county; Vice President, John W. Minto, 1848, Portland; Secretary, Geo. H. Himes, 1853, Portland; Treasurer, Chas. E. Ladd, 1857, Portland; Directors, W. E. Mager, 1852, Portland, Wm. Galloway, 1852, Mc Minnville, J. C. Moreland, 1852, Portland.

The most interesting event of the programme of Pioneer day, aside from the first greetings, is the banquet, for there everybody meets everybody, and the pioneers sit and talk over days long gone by as they eat the good things the Portland ladies have prepared for them. The banquet this year was the most successful ever given, considering the excellence of those provided in years past, is saying a good deal.

John Minto, of Salem, the well known pioneer of 1844, has been in town for a few days. In 1845, Mr. Minto burned charcoal within the limits of what is now Oregon City, and he attempted to locate the exact spot. Mr. H. L. Kelly says the old coal pit is immediately in front of his residence.

Republican Platform.

The Republicans in convention assembled at Chicago have adopted a platform declaring that the administration of affairs has been honest and efficient and that no imaginable legislation could have been better than theirs has been. They adopted a "stand pat" tariff plank, and declared in favor of reciprocity. They promise to uphold the gold standard, to foster the merchant marine, and to build up the navy. They approve the Chinese Exclusion Act, the Civil Service law, liberal pensions, and international arbitration. Combinations of capital and of labor are both lauded and denounced. And Roosevelt's administration is heartily indorsed.

of her pupils for wilful disobedience. The board of directors heard evidence in the case, and a majority decided that the teacher should be upheld. An appeal was taken to the County Superintendent, who held that it was not just to suspend this pupil without also suspending another who had been implicated with the first; that suspension was a punishment out of all proportion to the trivial nature of the offense; that the entire affair reflected little credit on the parties concerned, and that the pupil should immediately be restored to good standing in school without conditions.

From this decision the directors took an appeal to the State Superintendent. The State Board of Education reversed the County Superintendent, stating that the Board of directors are in a better position to judge of the merits of the case than either the County Superintendent or the State Board; that there was sufficient evidence to sustain the finding of the Board of directors; that as no complaint had been laid against "the other boy," and his being implicated in the offense had no bearing on the case; that the County Superintendent was not authorized in the face of the evidence in finding the punishment inflicted unjustifiable and out of all proportion to the nature of the offense.

The teachers of this county are congratulating themselves on the fact that we have a State Superintendent who will stand by them so long as they are in the right.
