A Machine Oil That Is a Machine Oil

We have a grade of Machine Oil now that we believe nine out of every ten farmers would buy from us if they knew as much about its good qualities as we do. We got it at a bargain by taking a large quantity and believe every man who uses a gallon on an engine or any kind of farm machinery will come back and want more. Remember it is not the ordinary grade of castor machine, but a heavy non-gumming oil that would be cheap at 60 cents a gallon—Bring a can and get a gallon at 40 cents.

George Avery, who lives near Maple Lane, was found guilty in the Justice court Friday of assault upon his former wife, Elizabeth Machette, and was fined $10, which he paid. The evidence showed that the woman had secured a divorce from her husband early in June, and a few days thereafter she went to the former home near Maple Lane to get certain household effects which she said were hers. Avery is said to have struck her while she was upon that errand and a jury decided that $10 fine would be a sufficient penalty.

Friday night in the I. O. O. F. hall, the Willamette Assembly of Rebekahs No. 2 gave a surprise and reception in honor of Past President Mrs. Lizzie Howell, which was a most pleasant fraternal event. About 100 members of the order were present. The hall was prettily decorated with pink roses and ferns which are the colors of the Rebekahs. During the evening music was furnished by Cooke's orchestra. A bountiful banquet had been provided, and as soon as the members were seated the noble grand, Mrs. Grace Nobis, with a neat presentation speech, presented Mrs. Howell with a past president's jewel. Mrs. Howell responded with a few well chosen words, expressing her appreciation. During the banquet remarks were made by Judges T. F. Ryan and William Galloway.

Forsythe Hatton, a well-known farmer of Stone, was killed in a runaway accident on the Beeson hill in the Beaver Creek neighborhood last Friday afternoon. Death was not immediate, but he lingered until the following morning, when he passed away. At the time of the accident, he was collecting cream for the Clear O'Leigh creamery, when his team became frightened by another team which ran past them down the hill. Hatton's horses then began to run, finally throwing him out of the rig and wounding him frightfully. The deceased was 40 years of age and leaves a wife and three children. One of the largest funerals ever held in the county was that held over the remains Sunday. Hatton was well known and liked throughout the county, and his death was most unfortunate.

George Joyce, the aged man who was injured at the Cliff House last Wednesday night and found the next morning in the cellar with wounds on the head, where he had, apparently been struck, died at a Portland hospital Saturday from the effects of his injuries. He never regained consciousness and there is no clue to the perpetrators of the crime, if crime it was. Coroner Holman summoned a jury to investigate the causes of death, Monday, and they returned a verdict that the man came to his death from causes unknown. Upon the night when Joyce was hurt, the room of Julius Grazier, night watchman at the woolen mill, was entered by thieves and $40 taken from his trunk. It is supposed that the thieves were seen by Joyce and rather than allow him to make an outcry they struck him in the back of the head. The skull was fractured, and although he lived a couple of days, he did not regain consciousness. Interment was had in the city cemetery. So far as known, the man had no relatives, and for several months he has been employed in the woolen mill here as wool sorter. He was not without money and left an estate valued at about $450.

J. J. Rice, a tramp, was run over by a train near New Era Saturday morning and his leg badly mangled, making it necessary to amputate the foot. The man was taken to Canby, where a physician rendered temporary aid, and he was put aboard the Albany local and brought to this city for the amputation of the limb. When the local arrived here, a lengthy wrangle ensued as to whether it was the duty of the railroad company or of the county to care for the unfortunate man, and the train was held here for an hour while the dispute waxed warm. Upon the advice of County Judge Ryan, County Physician Powell refused to take the man in charge and the train finally steamed away to Portland, where he was taken to a hospital. It is expected he will recover. Governor Chamberlain happened to be on the train en route for the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis. He urged the local authorities to take charge of the man and amputate his limb, but this was refused. He expressed considerable disgust that county officials would refuse aid to a man in dire need of it because it would entail a small expense upon the county, and characterized the action as the most cold-blooded that he had ever witnessed. Let the railroad men should be successful in putting the man off here, Deputy Sheriff Hackett was called to prevent such action being taken.
