

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION OPENS.

John Sharp Williams, Temporary Chairman, Makes a Ringing Speech to the Assembled Delegates.

The Democratic National Convention met in St. Louis at noon on the 6th. John Sharp Williams was elected temporary chairman, and addressed the convention in a ringing speech that was received with the greatest enthusiasm. An outline of his speech is here given:

"This is an appropriate place and time for a Democratic convention. The place is St. Louis, the chief city of the most populous state carved out of the Louisiana Territory acquired by the Father of Democracy. The time is the centennial anniversary celebration of the acquisition of that territory—a vast area of contiguous territory whose possession was necessary for self-defense, and which was fitted in climate and soil for home-making by the sons and daughters of the Republic—the anniversary of real, and not pseudo expansion—an expansion of our population, our industrial life and our free institutions over unhabited lands or lands sparsely settled by savages whose tribal independence was recognized by treating with them, or settled on spots by white men easily and willingly assimilated; not a so-called expansion by mere superimposed force of our flag and our military authorities.

The Democratic party afterward gathered the country to further expansion of this real, free character in the acquisition of Florida, the admission of Texas as a state and the acquisition from Mexico of a magnificent Far West, fit to be made states in the Union and governed under the constitution."

Mr. Williams stated that the most important quadrennial event in the world is the election by the American people of their chief executive. Before that great elevation takes place at which all men are supposed to arrive at by choice, and through byways of honesty and intelligence—would to God they did—at least two minor elections of a different character are held.

"There have always been two great parties who have elected delegates to conventions for the purpose of selecting a candidate and promulgating a platform.

"One of these has already selected its candidate and announced its platform. It was one of the quietest and most unanimous occasions that the muses of history have recorded.

"The address of its temporary chairman was in one sense historical, mostly ancient history and a great deal of it bad history. It was a labored attempt to draw away attention from Roosevelt with its volcanic, eruptive, reckless character by dwelling upon the fact that at some period in its history the Republican party had been a party which did things and did them safely."

The orator hoped to have the country keep in sight the fact that it is now in both legislative branches a party of non-action, obstruction to reform and progress; in a word, a party whose only sacred precept is the shibboleth drawn from the gambler's table, "stand pat," a precept born of cowardice and fear to move.

Williams quoted Root's temporary speech in which he said that the Republican party is the medium of the people in the expression of moral sentiment. The speaker then sarcastically went over a list of scandals in past and present history, referring to the Credit-Mobilier, the Degolyer-Ameis affair, the whiskey ring, and to a long "saturnalia" of southern reconstruction as ancient incidents.

The postoffice bureau scandal, the public lands bureau methods, fall away of bosses, and the celebrated order of "Hell Roaring Jake" Smith prescribing 10 years as the age above which children were to be killed in one of the islands of the Philippines, were referred to as modern instances.

The speaker laughed at Root's statement that offenders had been relentlessly punished. "The Secretary boasts" he said, "that the per capita of circulation of money among the people has increased from $23.14 in March 1897, to $31.02 in May last, and that the credit or that and the consequent prosperity is due to the Republican party." "What a curious boast this is," said he, "for those denying so strenuously that the quantity of money had anything to do with the value of money, of the price of other things as measured in money or with an ascending scale of prices, or with national prosperity.

"This was all denied but yesterday. "Now it is asserted that the volume of metallic money has been immensely increased, that it has brought prosperity and that all this is due to Republican legislation.

"Was Republican legislation operative in South Africa and the Klondike? Was it Republican legislation which made the immense crops? What partnership is there between gold and human industry and ingenuity and the Republican party, of which the Republican party is such a self-assertive senior member? What monumental affrontory!"

Turning to the Republican platform Mr. Williams declared it to be chiefly a boast that the Republican party is responsible for every good which has happened. This he denied, referring to "its present obstructiveness and its evasion of live issues."

INDUSTRIAL DEPRESSION.

Referring to the industrial depression which he said the Republicans have attempted to shoulder on to the previous Democratic administration, Williams said that when Cleveland came into office he found things on the downward path.

Reviewing the depression he said that the India famine and the immense wheat crop in the United States brought the price of 70 cents. When wheat went up silver bullion went down as there necessarily was a connection in price between the two. Thus it came about, he asserted, that McKinley was elected—because wheat went up.

The boast that McKinley's election was responsible for high prices, he declared was false and as to Cuba, public demand led the Republican party to fall into line and the Democrats voted for the war measure as enthusiastically as the Republicans.

"It would be invidious to state the

He lectures, July 15, at 8 p. m., on "The Mission of Mirth"; on Tuesday, July 19, at 8 p. m. on "Sunshine in Labor." At 8 p. m., Sunday, July 17, he will deliver a sermon.

politics of heroes," said Williams, "but I have heard that Dewey is a Democrat, Schley a Democrat, Miles a Democrat, and it seems to me that I have heard that the administration snubbed the first, tried to disgrace the second, and insulted the third."

Turning to the trust question he quoted the language of the Republican platform and went on to show that Attorney-General Harmon under Cleveland's administration really started suits against the trusts. He said "the boast that the administration has executed anti-trust laws is ridiculous, for Attorney-General Knox in response to my congressional resolution frankly confessed that nothing had been done and left the inference that nothing would be done."

Williams attacked the tariff plank in the Republican platform vigorously and then scathingly referred to the hydra head of special legislation advocated by the Republican substitutes. He claimed it would be far more justifiable to pass a law to give every sailor and every man and woman in the country earning less than a dollar a day, an increase of 50 per cent, than it would be by protectionism or a ship subsidy to pretend to have that end in view.

THE FRANCHISE LAWS.

The orator then launched into the constitutional limitations of the rights of franchise proposed for the Southern states, and declared the real object of the Republicans was to reduce southern representation without reducing that of other states in the North. He warned the Republicans, if Roosevelt should be elected on this platform, to be prepared for another period of business disturbance and race war in the southern states. His sarcasm was finely drawn as he referred to the scene at the Republican convention when two little negro boys were paraded before the delegates.

Turning to Democracy, Williams said it would nominate for president a man trained in the ways of the constitution who would not usurp legislation or judicial functions nor violate international usages or keep people guessing what he should do or say next, and that it would nominate him on a platform ignoring dead issues and dealing with every present live issue in tones certain and unmistakably favoring economy in administration and wise business-like revision and reduction of tariffs by friends of the masses of the people, as well as of the business interests of the country.
