Gentlemen: I have just returned from starting the Sanders double disk plow at Junction. As you well know I have always thought the Sanders disk plow all right but I must confess I was somewhat surprised today when we started it in land that had not been plowed for two years and had been stocked heavy since, it was just as hard as a road bed. The plow was a double disk, as the man had four small horses and wanted to plow deep, he concluded to take one disk off and use only three horses, which he did. We put the plow down 8 inches (actual measurement) and to say it did the work, is putting it mildly, and to say that the farmer as well as Mr. Wilhelm, the agent, were pleased is putting it lightly, they were simply amazdouble disk plows. In conclusion I will say the Sanders plow is head and shoulders above anything I have seen.

Yours truly, (Signed) P E. THOMASON.
