

METEORITE ON THE WAY

Famous Mass of Iron Goes to Exposition.

NOW NEAR WILLAMETTE

After Close of Lewis and Clark Fair Meteor Is To be Placed in Historical Exhibit.

The Willamette Falls meteorite, now that all litigation has finally been settled, is actually on its way to Portland, where the Oregon Iron & Steel Company will place it on exhibition at the Lewis and Clark Fair and afterwards will present it to the Oregon Historical Society. It will probably become part of the permanent exhibit at the Portland city hall.

The meteorite is at Willamette Falls and near the landing on the Willamette river below the town.

It is now being moved on a kind of sledge to the river by means of a capstan and teams. The work of moving it was begun last week and is in charge of Mr. Allen, of Portland. He has two crews of six men each and two teams of heavy draft horses at work and the labor of moving is carried on day and night. Mr. Allen thinks it will take about two days to get the meteorite to the river, where it will be loaded on a barge and towed to Portland.

The meteorite was discovered about two years ago on the lands of the Oregon Iron & Steel Company by Ellis Hughes. It was flat side up, like a tomahawk or a bell inverted and surrounded by hazel bushes.

Mr. Hughes began to move it over to his own land, using a capstan and team. The Oregon Iron & Steel Company enjoined him from moving it and the case was tried in the circuit court of Clackamas county, the court awarding the meteorite to the iron and steel company.

The suit was appealed to the supreme court of Oregon, where the decision of Judge McBride was sustained.

In the appeal a point was raised that is new in Oregon jurisprudence. The appellant claimed that the meteorite was abandoned property; that the Clackamas Indians called the stone "Tomanowas" and believed it fell from the moon. They allege that it was fashioned and maintained by them to hold the fluids into which they dipped their arrows when they went to war.

The meteorite is 7 by 10 feet across the top and 4 1/2 feet thick and its weight is estimated at four tons. Its specific gravity is that of soft iron, its composition being 90 per cent iron, 10 per cent nickel, with a trace of cobalt.

A Warning to Mothers.

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule, it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old-fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If this does not check the bowels, give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indications of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by Geo. A. Harding.
