Experience of a Rising Young Politician

"You find it interesting, do you not, Mr. Elymer," said the young woman with the spectacles and the high forehead, "to watch the variations of the index number from time to time, or recording either the effect of the administration's attitude toward the interests of the country or the fluctuations in the standard of values?"

"Er—yes, exceedingly," said the rising young politician. "The originally presented opinion, of course, is that a rise or fall of prices is in accordance with the law of supply and demand and relates to commodities in general, but you doubtless have grasped the point, and that these record merely the appreciation or depreciation of the monetary standard, more or less money being required to purchase a given article of merchandise, the variation making visible form in an apparent increase in the general level of prices? Is it not so?"

"Why—h'm." "You hesitate to commit yourself, perhaps on account of questions of policy and expediency, until the alignment of the great parties as to the abstract question involved has become more sharply defined?"

"Heavens!" he exclaimed half an hour later as he made his escape. "I don't mind a merely intellectual young woman, but this one's a financier and a political economist, and I'm dumfied if I don't believe she was making fun of me!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Light. The stranger halted on the edge of the hobo camp.

"We are so hungry, mister?" yawned the lanky hobo in the old tall hat.

"Then why don't you go out and beg at the nearest farmhouse?" asked the stranger.

"We are all so tired no one will volunteer, so we are going to shake dice to see who must perform the painful duty."

"Well, what is the delay?" "Why, we are waiting for an earthquake, boss, to come along and shake the dice box."—Detroit Free-Press.

A Joke in a Serious Place.

Certainly no one would think of reading a dictionary for amusement or pleasure—as the Irishman said, he would lose the thread of the story in the great mass of detail. Nor would one expect to find jokes in such a book, barring Mark Twain's about the car-buncle. But that learned and otherwise serious dictionary, the Century, contains at least one laughable entry. Under the word "question" is the following:

"To pop the question—see pop."—New York Times.

Bright Prospects.

"But aren't you afraid the baby may be spoiled?" "Not a bit. You see, its grandparents are all dead."—Philadelphia Press.

To Make It Tender.

"Walter" called the customer in the restaurant where an orchestra was playing.

"Yes, sah."

"Kindly tell the leader of the orchestra to play something sad and low while I dine. I want to see if it won't have a softening influence on this steak."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Quite So.

"Your husband is so full of fun, Mrs. Newrich, he makes people fairly shriek. He is always chaffing, isn't he?"

"Yes, indeed. I tell him he is quite a chauffeur."—Baltimore American.

The Kid Speaks.

My father's headpiece isn't cracked. Though you might think it, for a fact. He talks the strangest sort of rot and jabbers like an idiot. I can't tell half the time what he is trying to convey to me. But mother can and not half try—She's lived with him more years than I.

For instance, he says "nen" for "then," "And then" he changes to "an 'en," With "let" for "just" and "at" for "that."

He keeps me guessing where he's at. He twists and tortures every word or so. It seems to me absurd. And mother says he won't outgrow it because by trade he is a poet.

She says he fills the family purse by writing yards and yards of verse like this: "Last night 'st after tea My pa sat taked me on his knee. Nen ma she laffed 'st fit to kill. An' 'en she said to Uncle Bill, 'Now, Wil-yum, don't you think that he 'is 'st as cute as he can be?' An' 'en my uncle laffed: 'Ha, ha! Hee, hee! Ho, ho! 'st like his pa!'"

They sound to me like awful drivel. These poems of the "an 'en" school.

Stoeever a Coming Man.

Rev. C. F. W. Stoeever, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Tacoma, Wash., reached a sermon last Sunday at Tacoma on, "The Strength of Man." Mr. Stoeever is an Oregon City boy and has friends here who are watching his upward career. He has the making of a great preacher. The Tacoma Daily Ledger, of July 28, contained a two column write-up of his sermon.

Cattle Eat Wild Parsnips.

W. S. Eddy, a veterinarian of this city, reports the death of several cows in this vicinity recently, caused by eating wild parsnip, which grows on ditches and small streams, where cattle usually graze. His attention has been called to three or four cases. Animals eating the vegetable are at once seized with paralysis and fatal results follow within a few hours.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS.

Oregon City People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words, but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills, For Oregon City kidney sufferers, Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Oregon City people who have been cured to say cured.

William McLarty, tailor in the courthouse block, living at 16th and Washington Sts., Oregon City, Ore., says: "I had persistent backache and pain through the loins that seemed to never let up, and the worst part of it was the annoyance I was caused at night, for I could not find a comfortable position or get any restful sleep on account of the continual aching. The result was I lost energy. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills curing others of similar trouble and I procured a box at Huntley Bros. Co. drug store. By the time I had used half of one box there was so much improvement that it seemed almost unnecessary to take any more, but I finished the box to make sure of the beneficial results. I could then sleep the entire night, arise rested in the morning, and not a trace of the aching remained."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
