FRISKY STEEDS REBEL.
The lively buckskin bronchos attached to the Molalla stage driven by "Link" Waldron, became dissatisfied with life as they found it within the narrow limits of their traces and Wednesday morning made an exciting protest against being compelled to spend their equine existence within the confines of civilization. The higher mentality of Link, however, together with the strength of his good right arm persuaded his rebellious steeds that the best place for them in the infinite scheme of the universe is the quiet road between Oregon City and Molalla.

MAY ESCAPE CHARGE.
Thomas Davis, who is under $1000 bonds charged with a statutory offense, may evade trial by taking the course usually followed in cases of this kind. The complaining witness is Lizzie Parry, who lives in the vicinity of Beaver Creek. The preliminary examination of Davis has been set in the justice court but the hearing has been postponed. Davis was arrested August 22, 1903, and after being released in his own recognizance, fled the state, but returned a few days ago. During his absence his mother died and he finally yielded to the longing for home.
