

BRIDGE CLOSED ON CLACKAMAS

Structure on Lower River In Unsafe Condition

REPAIRS TO COST $2200

Estacada Bridge Also In Bad Shape and Will Be Re-built This Summer.

The county bridge over the Clackamas River near Gladstone was Wednesday night closed to the public, on account of its dangerous condition. The work was commenced at once on the repairs, which will cost about $2200. There will be a new concrete pier built on the Parkside side of the stream. A new pier was placed on the North side about four years ago. The bridge has been in an unsafe condition for several years, and the climax was reached Wednesday, when four heavy teams, hauling wagons loaded with ten tons of iron, crossed the structure. The main braces, that were ironed over four years ago, had become rotted and the strain was too great and they sank down, and it is the greatest wonder that the bridge did not fall. The County had already arranged to repair the bridge and had a bill for lumber in for the purpose of replacing the old timbers with new ones. It is probable that the bridge will not be reopened for many weeks, as it will take considerable time to erect the false work and make all of the repairs that are necessary.

The Estacada bridge is also in a bad condition and a new bridge will be built there this summer. The County Court will hold a special session for the purpose of arranging to advertise for bids for the construction of the new structure.

GROUNDS ARE OPEN

The third day of Chautauqua opened with a larger attendance than has been present at any of the previous sessions. More campers were on the grounds in their tents, and the general confusion arising from the opening of the grounds after a year's idleness has been entirely overcome, so that things have settled down into the regular routine.

The classes were held under their regular instructors. Mrs. Alice M. Handsaker taking the junior Bible study; Professor A. M. Grille, physical culture; Dr. B. J. Hoadley, English literature; Professor W. Eugene Knox, elocution; Hon. Willis C. Hawley, United States history; Lillian Tingle, domestic science; Rev. James Hoffman, Bible study, and Mrs. Eva Emery Dye continuing the Chautauqua Forum. The morning's forum was one of the most instructive from the point of view of general information of any that have ever been held at the Chautauqua assemblies. N. J. Levison, Sunday editor of the Oregonian, gave a most interesting talk on "A Day's Work in a Newspaper Office," describing in detail the regular routine that is followed in the collection and publication of the day's news.

His subject was entirely new to many of his hearers, and they listened with much interest to his description of the way a paper is published, following with the mind's eye the busy scenes that ensue, from the giving out of the assignments to the closing up of the forms and putting the paper on the press and then the hurry when a big "story" comes in at the last minute necessitating the getting out of an extra edition. He instilled into his audience a much better appreciation of the hard task of the reporter in getting what he is sent out after and caused them possibly to have a little more charity for what some of them had considered the nuisances of society.

Another phase of newspaper work was treated in the talk given by Jennie Allan George, correspondent for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, on the subject of "Women in Journalism." She told of the unpleasant things that a woman engaged in writing for the papers has to contend with, and of the disappointments and discouragements that she meets. She told of the vanities and follies of the women who like to see their names in the papers, and how they treat the poor society reporter when they think they do not get their full share of mention. The women, she said, were the drudges of the newspaper office, and yet at the same time there is compensation for all the drudgery and the unpleasantness in the satisfaction that comes with the knowledge of work well done, and the feeling of pride resulting from a good "story" landed.

Mrs. Walter W. Bruce recited "What John Henry Did" in an entertaining and amusing manner. Mrs. Bruce has much power of expression, and a very pleasant voice, and those present at the Forum were delighted with her.

Professor Ewing, of Portland Academy, began a course of lessons in the morning on the Immigration question. His first subject was "The Alien Advance," in which he gave a short history of the influx of foreigners to these shores, and described the racial characteristics of the different nations that are coming which would tend to make them good or bad citizens. Today he takes up the subject of "Alien Admission or Restriction, with Problems of Legislation."

DRIVEN OUT OF HOUSE BY SON

Aged Parents Are Ejected From Their Home.

MR. EBY CALLS A HALT

George McKinnis Is Forced to Provide For Father and Mother During Their Declining Years.

After having driven his aged father and mother into the streets, George McKinnis, of Clackamas Heights, was Tuesday afternoon ordered to pay in to the County Court $30 per month for their support and maintenance. The old couple gave a pathetic recital of their wrongs at the hands of their son. The age of Charles McKinnis is past 78 years, and his wife, Jerusha McKinnis, is nearly 83 years of age. "During the last two years," said Mr. McKinnis, "we have lived partly with our son, George, at Clackamas Heights and partly with our son, Lewis, at Portland. Eight months ago, at the request of George, we moved to Clackamas Heights, living in a house which I assisted largely in constructing upon the premises owned by George. During the last eight months George has mistreated my wife and myself and about two weeks ago he became violently angry and drove us into the streets. We were left without food or shelter, and went to the home of John Dugger, at Clackamas Heights, where we have since been staying. Dugger is nearly 75 years of age, and his wife is very feeble.

"My sons, William, of Clackamas Heights, and Lewis of St. Johns, have large families and very little money or property, but George is worth about $3500 and well able to care for us during our few remaining years."

Deputy District Attorney O. D. Eby took charge of the case and presented the facts to the county court.

Shipping Trout Fry.

Thousands of trout fry are being shipped away from the Clackamas Station of the United States Bureau of Fisheries to Oregon and Washing-

Reif, state fish warden for King County, at Seattle, 13,000 Rainbow trout to La Grande for adjacent streams, 200 Rainbow trout to J. W. Pierce of Hood River, 2000 Rainbow trout to Cascade Locks, and 5000 5000 Rainbow trout to L. S. Fritz, of The Dalles, being shipped to Mosier.

Two Saloons In Milwaukee.

The Milwaukee Council will limit the number of saloons in that place to two. An ordinance to this effect would have passed Tuesday night, but there was no quorum present and it went over till the next meeting. There are two saloons in Milwaukee, and they have consented to pay an annual license of $600 if the Council will grant no more licenses. This was agreed to. Applications had been made for two more licenses, but the Council decided that two saloons were sufficient.
