SHERIFF'S RECORD YEAR

Number of Marriage Licenses is Just 100 In Excess of Divorce Suits—Heavy Increase in Property Valuation.

The body of James Phegley, who disappeared Wednesday, December 18, was found Thursday morning by J. W. Cook, of Aurora, in a thicket a few miles south of Aurora. The unfortunate man had suicided by stabbing himself to the heart with a pocket knife, after making a gash in his neck and partly severing his jugular vein. The blade of the knife was 2 1/2 inches in length, and the wounds that were self-inflicted must have caused almost instant death.

The act of Phegley was due to his despondent condition. For months he had brooded over a fancied story that he said was being told about him, and the Sunday before his death he wrote a letter to the Russellville Nursery, which had sent him bills amounting to $75, for collection. Phegley was employed by the nursery company, advising them that "he had got into trouble and would have to skip." In this letter, which was not mailed, but was found at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Rydman, at Canby, Phegley said he was returning the bills and would look to their customers direct for the money.

Phegley went from Canby the day before his disappearance to Wilsonville, St. Paul and Butteville, where he delivered some trees that had been shipped to these points by the nursery company. He then drove to Champoeg, where he remained over night, and the next morning about 6 o'clock he started, as he said, to Canby. Little account was taken of his disappearance until a week later, when his son, Grant Phegley, manager of the Columbia Woolen Mills store in Portland, went to Woodburn to spend Christmas with his sister, and for the first time heard that his father was missing. The son instituted a search along the road from Champoeg to Aurora, but found no trace of his father.

On Tuesday of last week, as Dr. Dedman, of Canby, was driving up the Aurora hill, he saw the horse that belonged to Phegley and brought the animal back to Canby. It has since been ascertained that the horse, after being released by Phegley, went to Needy, where he was formerly owned, and wandered around the country for two weeks before starting back to Canby.

Within one and one-half miles of Aurora, before the day had hardly broken, Phegley drove his horse and buggy into the brush. He took the harness off the animal and calmly turned him loose. After pinning a note to the buggy, with the words, "This buggy and harness belongs to Canby, James Phegley," the demented man took his pocket knife, that has been identified as his own, drew the weapon across his throat and then plunged the blade into his heart.

The body was found about 300 yards down under the stump of an uprooted tree, where his body was shattered, and only one arm was outstretched and exposed to the rains. The remains were in a fair state of preservation.

The funeral was held at Canby, Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of Meade Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, of Oregon City, of which deceased was a member.

The Pure Food Law.

Secretary Wilson says, "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit-forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is made on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest, but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use.
