Many of Our Citizens Speak Well of the Home Prescription Which Helped Them to Health

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A local druggist is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from our home druggists.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive kidneys, overcoming Backache, Bladder weakness and Urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man and woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print this remarkable prescription, in October, of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities have made announcements of it to their readers.

ESTACADA MAN'S CONFIDENCE IS BETRAYED.

Ed Nelson Plays Good Samaritan to His Impetuous Relative and Loses $350 in Consequence.

Ed Nelson, a saddlemaker, living on the Estacada carline, at Wichita Station, has been robbed of the savings of two years, with which he had planned to build a home. Not only his money gone, but so is his brother, Newton Nelson. The money and the brother disappeared simultaneously. Nelson is loth to believe that his brother would rob him, but since there was no other logical conclusion to be reached he sought out the police yesterday and asked for a warrant for the arrest of his brother.

The amount taken was $350. Nelson had been saving to put up a comfortable cabin or bungalow on his five-acre tract. He had the money in the bank until the recent panic, at which time he drew the cash out and sewed it in the mattress of his bed. Nobody knew the secret hiding place but Nelson's wife.

About this time Newton Nelson appeared. He was down in his luck. He was out of work, hungry and distressed, and Ed Nelson welcomed him and made him stay until work became more plentiful. Later, of course, the brother was told of the money having been taken from the bank and of the hiding place.

Last Monday Newton disappeared. The other Nelson was very much worried. He thought his brother might have met with an accident and asked the police to look out for him. Nothing was thought of the missing money. The following day, however, the significance of Newton's sudden levitating became manifest.

The first load of lumber with which the new bungalow was to be built arrived on the Nelson premises. After it had been unloaded, Mrs. Nelson went to the mattress to get money to pay for it. At the place where she had sewed in the money there was a slit. The money was gone, to the last penny.

Nothing else about the house was missing and since jewelry might have been taken and other articles of value, the Nelsons were surprised at the lax methods of the burglar that had visited their home. Then it flashed on them who the thief must be. Proof of the missing brother's guilt seemed conclusive. It was recalled that he left without saying a word and that he had acted peculiarly before leaving.

It took two days for Nelson to allow himself to think that he had been robbed by his own brother of the little board saved for purchasing a home. Yesterday he consulted Deputy District Attorney Stevenson and presented the facts. A warrant would have been issued at once, except that Wichita is just over the line in Clackamas county. Nelson was referred to the District Attorney at Oregon City. He said he intended following the case up and having his brother returned.

In any place I've been— It was so well assorted, and looked So neat and clean.

Potatoes, too, of every kind, And pumpkins large were there, And one of them would make a pie To each one at the fair.

There were cabbage, beets and cauliflower, And corn, both ripe and green. I think it was the largest fair That ever I have seen.

Italian prunes and good white bread On which we sometimes dine, And jellies made by maidens fair, And grapes for making wine.

The ladies, too, both old and young, I think their praises should be sung. For making laces pure and white, As e'er was seen by morning light.

They've comforts made to keep us warm, And floor mats for our feet, And tidies for each rocking chair, And cushions for each seat.

And many other things they've made: Their names I do not know, But bless the ladies every one, Who graced the country show.

THE COUNTY FAIR

Read by Wm. Beard at Maple Lane Grange.

Oh! what a crowd upon the road; They are going to and fro— In "Gladstone Park," you know.

The gardeners and the farmers, too, Are showing fruit and grain, And if the fair succeeds this time We'll have a fair again.

Now let us enter through the gates And see what's to be seen; I'm sure if we had had more time It would have better been.

But each one did the best he could, And hopes a prize to gain, And if we don't succeed this time— We'll try it yet again.

And as I walked within the park The first thing met my sight Was children on the hobby horses, Screaming with delight.

And as they went around each time, Their joyous voices raised, Which made me think of former times, My childhood's happy days.

Then to the auditorium I quickly took my way, To see the truck and fruit again That Mary did display.

I thought they looked so very nice, As they appeared in view, And each one tried their best to get A ribbon red or blue.

I never saw such fruit before politics in Oregon and I learned that the only way to get anything was to get as many strings out as possible and maybe one would land. I was not a serious candidate for Congress, but I'd have taken the nomination or the position of District Attorney. I have selected a good many United States Senators and never got anything but promises. I knew that I was being undermined in my efforts to be United States District Attorney, and I am confident that although I had the promise of Fulton and Mitchell, it was never intended that I should be rewarded with the position. I tried to keep my county organized, and I was a sort of political employment agency in Clackamas, and whenever anyone wanted a job they came to me and I got it for them if I could. I once wrote a letter for Mrs. Woodcock once, trying to get her a position. When I wrote the letter recommending Hall for District Attorney I expected his support for Congress. I've expected a good many things for a great many years and never got them. Neither Mitchell nor Fulton would have been in the Senate if it had not been for me."

Brownell denied that he has been promised immunity by Heney or any one else. He declared he would not accept immunity from the United States Government, for he had done nothing wrong. He was not afraid of a trial, for he knew he could prove his innocence of those field notes, but he was shaky about an indictment, for that would ruin him. He said he wanted all kinds of protection against perjured testimony, and that was why he was willing to get out of Hall's way, but as for a trial on the charge he knew even a jury of Clackamans would acquit him. Brownell turned over all his private papers to Detective W. J. Burns, when the Government suspected he was connected with the land frauds. The correspondence was turned over after Brownell had consulted as to the advisability with Mitchell.

Following are letters that show something of the working of politics under the old regime. These, and many others of a similar character, make up a part of the evidence on which the Government hopes to convict Hall.

Brownell to Mitchell.

Oregon City, Or., Oct. 25, 1903.

Hon. John H. Mitchell, U. S. Senate, Washington, D. C.—My Dear Sir and Friend: As I told you at the time, I knew that Hall would try to make it appear that I had some connection with Meldrum and Wagner in some things that occurred in the Surveyor-General's office. He called me to see him yesterday, the grand jury being in session, and threatened me, of course claiming that Hitchcock and Green were pressing him to this. He gave me to understand, after I told him that I was in no way connected and in no way to blame, that even if I was not, the fact of my being indicted would destroy my political chances, as the Oregonian would magnify it. I am now satisfied that Fulton has known about this all along, as the night he went away for Washington I cautioned him about informing Hall about the arrangements to give this place to Campbell. If Fulton had done as I asked him to do, Hall would not now be pressing me, as I had told Hall that day that I had released Fulton so far as I was concerned. I explained all this to Fulton and he said to me that he would simply tell Hall that he did not know what the delegation was going to do and could not tell until they met in Washington. Hall now tells me that Fulton told him that Campbell was to be appointed and I was to have the division of his salary. He finally said to me that if I would give him a letter to you and to Fulton, indorsing him to United States District Attorney, that he would stop any proceedings against me, and as an evidence of the value of his services, tells me that he would have trouble with Hitchcock and Green, as they were very anxious to have an indictment brought in against Meldrum, Wagner and myself. Therefore I wrote him such a letter, indorsing him to you and Fulton both, for U. S. District Attorney, F. C. Baker, who is chairman of the state committee, advised me to do this and said he would see you and Fulton and insist that I did right in doing it. Now, my dear friend, it is up to you and Fulton to say whether I am going to suffer any more in order to let Hall hold over. If Fulton had done what he had ought to have done, I would have had the place when he went back to take his oath of office. Hall has been given all opportunity to work every conceivable string against me that he could and I now believe that Fulton knew it and has expected him to do it and has stood in with him. You must remember that unless Campbell gets this place I am at the end of my string so far as reorganizing Clackamas County.

"Now, my dear friend, I have not got a dollar in the world, and not only that, I have got to go to the hospital very soon, and I have got about as much trouble as I can stand, and I want you for old friendship's sake to help me in this way and make Fulton stand up to it.

With best wishes for your and Fulton's health and success, I remain, Sincerely your friend,

GEO. C. BROWNELL.

Mitchell and Fulton to Brownell.

Washington, Jan. 18, 1904.

Hon. George C. Brownell, Attorney at Law, Oregon City, Or.—My Dear Senator and Friend: I have delayed answering your letter received some ten days ago in which you state that you think the time has come for you to make the race for Congress, and you want to know whether Senator Fulton and I can help you.

There is no question, my dear friend, about our desire to help you in any way in our power, but there are a good many things to be considered, as it seems to both of us, looking to your own interests, before we attempt at this long range to inaugurate a campaign. In other words, what I mean is this: It does seem to me, as also to Senator Fulton, after discussing the matter fully, that if we commence writing letters in your interest in regard to the Congressional nomination, we are liable to do you more harm than good. We are liable to array every other man that thinks he is entitled to go to Congress against you, to start on; and it certainly will array Hermann, who is here on the ground, and who would be sure to hear of it, against you. It is impossible for us to conduct a campaign of that kind from here by letter, without it becoming known all over the state.

You know there are quite a number in the different sections of the state who would like to go to Congress—Gatch, in Salem, perhaps one or two others, probably Geer, Till Ford, Kelly in Albany, probably Harris or Woodcock, or both; in Eugene, Vawter in Medford; probably Carter of Ashland, Eddy of Tillamook, Huston of Hillsboro and perhaps others.

The moment it is known that Fulton and I, neither of whom live in this district, are taking an active, aggressive part as against all these and in your favor, is simply to array the whole crowd against both you and us, together with all their friends, and a campaign will at once be commenced by each one of them to pull you down. Now, I will give you an idea of the way in which you ought to proceed in order to win the prize. Simply look out for your own county and see that you get a good solid delegation from that county to the district convention—men that will stand by you first, last and all the time. Do not try to interfere, make no special effort, except as you can do so quietly, without open antagonism to any other probable candidate, to secure the votes of delegations in counties that will have a candidate. Keep on friendly terms with all the candidates, and in this shape go to the convention, and then will be the time, or at least shortly before then, to make combinations that will win. You may then be able to do it by compromises and arrangements with the different candidates, or with enough of them to control the convention.

Now, friend Brownell, you may think, "Oh, this is a very fine way for Mitchell and Fulton to get out of helping me," but I submit to you, think over this whole business, and I am sure your good political sense and shrewdness will lead you to the conclusion that this is good advice.

We may be able, when the time comes, to help you, and to help you materially. And I am sure it will be impossible to have any understanding between you and Hermann at this time, so as to stand by each other, and whoever has the longest pole takes the perch. It is entirely to early to expect to be able to make any such arrangement with Hermann. I did write one letter in your interest to Mr. Goode, and also one to Senator Booth, as I knew they could be trusted to treat the matter as strictly confidential, but I have not written to any others, and I tell you frankly it is not good policy to do so, for the reason that I believe the result would injure your cause, and this is the opinion of Senator Fulton, and I can assure you we are both anxious to discharge in some proper way the great obligation we are both under to you.

I have received your several dispatches since Hall left Portland, and since he arrived here, and both Senator Fulton and myself have done everything in our power to protect you and also Campbell, who is also under the ban of Green and others, as we learn to our great surprise and regret, and without going into particulars I think we have been able to do an arrangement as to protect you both.

Of course, friend Brownell, this letter is to you in the strictest confidence. The best way for the present is to drop all talk as it stands for the present. Both Fulton and I have, in order to fully protect your interests, gone very much further in a certain direction than we ever supposed we would. I cannot explain fully to you until I see you, just what I mean. Hall leaves this evening for home. My advice would be for you to say nothing to him whatever, unless he says something to you. Just let the matter rest, and drift for the present. This is all-important.

Personally I would very much like to see you come to Congress, but as I said before, I am sure your interests would not be advanced in that direction by anything I can do in the way of writing letters at this particular time. It is better for both Fulton and I not to do anything to drive from us men that we are under obligations to and their friends, other than yourself, so that when the proper time comes we may be able to exercise an influence in some way for your benefit.

Think over this matter carefully, and then let me know what you think of it. Hoping that this may find you and family in good health, believe me, faithfully and sincerely, your friend, (Signed) JOHN MITCHELL.

P. S. I return Hofer's letter. I have read the above and fully concur in it.

(Signed) C. W. FULTON.

While the charge against Hall is conspiring with others in fencing government land, the only evidence is brought in to show similar acts on the part of Hall to those that are charged as making him guilty of the specific crime.
