 County Horticulturists Plan for One at Saturday's Meeting.

At a meeting of the Clackamas County Horticultural Society held in the Courthouse Saturday afternoon, plans for the erection of a cannery were discussed and much interest was manifested by all present.

A number of local men spoke in favor of the project, as did also M. C. Britton, an eastern Oregon man, who has carefully gone over the fruit lands of this county to ascertain if the plan would be feasible. He spoke highly in favor of the cannery, and so positive was he of its success that he offered to finance the enterprise. Mr. Britton says that there are at least 100,000 boxes of fruit in sight for next year's crop. After some further discussion, it was decided that the plan was a good one and in a few days the articles of incorporation will be filed, and the stock placed on the market. There will be 5000 shares, selling at $10 per share. Of this amount, $20,000 will be preferred stock and the balance common. In addition to the regular dividends, the stockholders of preferred stock will receive a dividend of 5 per cent on their investments.

No doubt little difficulty will be encountered in disposing of the stock as there are many fruit growers who favor the scheme and will be glad to take hold of the proposition in this manner. When the plant is under operation the value of having such an institution in this district will be quite noticeable as from the experience of those who have passed through the period of fruit growing with and without a cannery throughout the east can attest to the increase in the value of fruit lands as it is thoroughly understood in such sections that such a plant increases the value in adjacent territory sometimes fifty per cent, with a corresponding decrease from that according to the lands and the distance from the cannery.

Houses are very scarce any place inside the city limits or within a mile or two from the city. A vacant property does not have to go begging and is invariably snapped up within twenty-four hours.

Many newcomers are taking up their abode within our city limits, some desiring city property and others preferring the rural districts. Many from the larger cities, and we note a good many from Portland getting into our rural districts. Strangers are continually appearing at the various places of business and enquiring for property. They are referred to our local agents, who spare no pains to satisfy their desires. Four were thus referred to one agency Tuesday afternoon, and still they come.

State Endeavor at Eugene.
 The eighteenth state convention of the Oregon Christian Endeavor Union closed last Sunday evening after the most successful session in the history of Endeavor in Oregon. Nearly 150 delegates were present, principally from the Willamette Valley, the following from this city attending: Miss Edna Kinney, Miss Ella Dempster, Miss Margaret Wilkinson, Miss Jessie Paddock, Miss Beulah McMillan.

The list of speakers included the strongest men in the state—in fact, there was not a weak speaker on the whole program. Snap and vigor characterized all the sessions, and the Endeavor movement received great impetus from the meeting.

Rev. C. J. Furd, of Corvallis, was re-elected president, and Miss A. Viola Charleston as secretary. F. A. Tripp, of Eugene, was elected treasurer.

Eugene furnished entertainment for all the delegates, and through the cooperation of the merchants had the business streets ablaze with C. E. programs and the C. E. colors. The next convention will be held in 1910, most likely in some place in Eastern Oregon.

 Fire Discovered Underneath the Balds' Home Extinguished in the Nick of Time.

What might have been a most disastrous fire was luckily discovered by neighbors of Mrs. Hoar about midnight Monday night, and prompt action on their part no doubt saved not only the property but undoubtedly the life of Mrs. Hoar as well. Neighbors returning from some social function discovered the blaze underneath the kitchen which is set up of the ground about two feet. The fire had already gained considerable headway and it was with considerable effort on their part that the same was gotten under control. It appears from all the evidence at hand that it was of incendiary origin, as quite a large amount of bark and kindling wood positively taken from the wadded hear by was partially burned, and was arranged in proper shape to do such work. This bundle of wood had apparently been placed underneath the kitchen floor and then lighted with the intent to burn the house. No trouble is known in any particular with Mrs. Hoar and residents of the town, and the fact that the wood was so placed and ignited as stated only seems to deepen the mystery. At the time of the fire Mrs. Hoar was asleep and had the flames been given a few moments more time she would undoubtedly have been consumed with the building.

This is the program mapped out by the promoters of the movement for the establishment of the municipal system of irrigation. That it is going to be a popular move is certain, if the manner in which it is being received is a criterion.

 A Fine Evening's Entertainment by Tualatin Tent in Woodmen Hall.

That the members of Tualatin Tent, K. O. T. M., do not intend to lose the reputation already earned of being the Royal Entertainers was manifest Monday night, when they instituted a smoker in the Woodmen of the World hall, many friends taking advantage of the occasion to have a good time attending, not only from this city but from the neighboring towns and Portland as well. The first part of the evening was spent in playing cards, after which the following interesting program was rendered: Piano solo, Prof. Frank Betzel; address State Organizer J. W. Sherwood; address, Hon. G. B. Dimmick; song, Maccaboe Quartette; address, John A. Jeffrey, of Portland; song, Claire Gordon; address, E. M. Lance, of Portland; song, W. A. Kinney, of Portland, followed by two lively three-round sparring matches by amateur boxers of Portland. Then came the feast, a banquet that has not been equaled in the city for years. It is not the custom to sing after such an hearty repast, but everybody sang, some in quartettes, duets and solos to the heart's content. It was a most enjoyable affair and unstinted praise is heard on every side from those in attendance.

William H. Mattoon.
 Aside from their rating among the most progressive agriculturists of Clackamas County, there are probably more large land owners claiming a parentage by the name of Mattoon, than have emanated from any other family settling on the Pacific coast. During the last half of the eighteenth century there was born in New York State a predestined farmer who had eight children, John, Abel, Allen, Liza, Polly, Orilla, Remy, M., and Orin M. With these children the father came to Oregon in 1847, and in the meantime Polly and Orilla had married men by the name of Cutting, and Liza had become the wife of a Mr. Wells. The party came across the plains with ox teams, and at the end of their six months' journey stopped near Oregon City, the next year all hands going out to the vicinity of Viola, where, with the exception of John, the oldest son, they took up separate donation claims. To Abel fell six hundred and forty acres; to Allen, the same amount; to Remy, three hundred and twenty acres; to Orin, the same amount; to each of the Cutting ladies six hundred and forty acres, and to Mrs. Wells a similar amount. It will thus be seen that the name of Mattoon was firmly established in Clackamas County at very early day, and from the outset has been indicative of ambitious and altogether substantial undertakings.

Abel Mattoon, the father of William H., the latter of whom is one of the prominent citizens of this county, was born in New York State in 1806, and died in Oregon in 1888. In his early youth he learned the millwright and carpenter trades, and when a young man accompanied his parents and brothers and sisters to the State of Indiana, where his son, William H., was born in La Grange County, October 3, 1845. When the family fortunes were shifted to the Coast in '47, Abel located on his six hundred and forty acres of land, and in connection with its management started a sawmill at Viola, paying his hands as high as $20 a day for their services. He worked up quite a lumber business, and in Private Injuries and Public Wrongs.

 There is a difference between enforcing laws for a violation of which there is a private injury coupled with a public wrong, and enforcing laws for the protection of the public. If a man is robbed, for instance, he will usually see to it that the robber is prosecuted. If a man is murdered, the relatives or friends of the murdered man will generally put the machinery of the law in motion against the murderer. In each of these instances there is a private injury as well as a public wrong. In bribery, violation of the gambling laws, the dram-shop laws, or railroad rebate laws, there may be no individual injury, but there is always a public injury. Laws of this kind are the most difficult of enforcement, and unless the official who represents the public takes it upon himself to see that they are carried out they often go unenforced. Without officials to execute them, they are as senseless as guns in war without men behind them.—Governor Folk, of Missouri, in "Respect for Law," in The Youth's Companion.

time shipped his wares to San Francisco. His industry as a farmer resulted in the clearing of one hundred acres of his property, upon which he lived on contentedly until the year before his death, when he went to live with his son, Perry M. He was a man of firm character and much natural ability, and in his adopted state made his influence felt in many ways. During the Civil War he served as County Commissioner under Republican rule for a couple of years, and he was for many years a member of the school board. In religion he affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he was a steward, and towards which he contributed as his means permitted. One of the most ambitious of the brothers and sisters who came here in the early days, he was a typical pioneer, broad-minded, liberal and keenly alert to the advantages by which he was surrounded. For one year he was survived by his wife, Sarah (Lewis) Mattoon, who passed into the silence at the age of 72-years. Of the children born to this couple, Printias Yakima lives in Washington; Mrs. Malinda Dubois is deceased; Perry M. lives in Tillamook, Oregon; William H. lives in Viola; Mrs. Orilla Walker is a resident of Viola; Mrs. Rosalia Hughes also lives in Oregon; Newton M.; Leander M. is a resident of East Portland, and Mrs. Clarissa Gail lives in Oregon City.

At the age of 21 years William H. Mattoon left his father's home and spent a year in Eastern Oregon, after which he entered Willamette University, remaining there for three years. Having qualified as a teacher he engaged in educational work from 1870 to 1873 in Clackamas county, and then took up small contracts, making his home in the meantime in Sylvester. In 1875 he removed to the old homestead near Viola, purchased one hundred and forty acres of the original donation claim taken up by his father, upon which he has since been engaged in general farming. Like his sire, he represents the most progressive and liberal-minded element in his neighborhood, and like him has had a hand in promoting general good government and agricultural excellence. For a number of years he filled the office of constable under Republican administration, and has also been road supervisor, as well as school director for a number of years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and steward in the same.

In 1878 Mr. Mattoon married Caroline Tracy, of which union there have been born eight children: Arthur, of Cascade Locks; Frank, of Redland; Harvey, of Viola; Mrs. Edna Brown, of Linn county; Herbert, of Viola; John, of Viola; Eva, of Viola, and Robert, of Viola.

WOMEN TO PROPOSE.

Adam Bede Would Deny Man's Right to Pop the Question.

LOVE A GAME OF THE FAIR SEX

When Men Propose He Gets a Brain Storm, Says Minnesota Representative—Sure Solomon Was Wooded. Has Matrimonial Bureau That Ends Divorce and Liquor Habits.

Convinced that his fellow men are more burglars in the game of love and that if women were required to propose the golden age would come again. Representative J. Adam Bede of Minnesota, widely known as the "wit of the house of representatives," has evolved a scheme for a bureau of matrimony which, he contends, will solve the marriage problem for every one.

All that persuasive eloquence which Mr. Bede has hitherto employed to good purpose in assisting voters to make up their minds is henceforth at the service of lovely woman. He has served notice on the country that from now on he will not cease to wield the cudgel in defense of her right to pop the question to the man of her choice. To a Washington Post reporter, eager to learn the details of his great scheme, Mr. Bede recently consented to unfold his plan.

"I haven't introduced a bill for a matrimonial bureau yet, because I haven't had time to do any missionary work among the other fellows in congress," said he. "Three or four of them are sort of old fogish and may need a little talking to. I am going to try to have all the presidential candidates go on record on the matrimonial question."

"It's high time women did the proposing. We men have been on the job for 2,000 years, and the fact that we have made a complete failure of it is proved by the number of divorces, which is increasing every day. Why, divorce is as common now as appendicitis, and it's all the fault of us men. It shows we are in the amateur class in this affinity business. When any one of us does succeed in avoiding disaster as a husband, it's because he has a skillful domestic pilot who can keep him from running on to the rocks.

"Centuries of failure on our part have shown us that the old spoils system of matrimony is all wrong. It must be put under the civil service. I propose to establish a bureau of matrimony and place it under—well, I guess it ought to go in the department of commerce and labor. Then all the ladies who wanted to propose could file an application with the department. That would create an eligible list, and any of them could insist on getting a matrimonial appointment within the year.

"Now, none of the ladies agrees with Mr. Parsons on the trial marriage proposition, so I suppose it wouldn't do to offer any of them a temporary appointment. We'd have to give them permanent places. It would be a great scheme. There's everything to commend it. In the first place, women understand men, but who ever saw the man that understands a woman?"

"When a man's in love, he is a bigger fool than usual. Why, the most of us by the time we get to the proposing point are mentally fit for the morgue. It takes a brain storm to get one of us white livered cowards to make a declaration of love. But the ladies are equal to any sentimental emergency.

"The ladies—that reminds me. The other night I went to a banquet, where some one proposed the health of the ladies. Now, it happened that every man there was married, and so we drank that toast in silence. I suppose no one could think of anything nice enough to say about them.

"I don't claim to be the originator of this matrimonial bureau scheme. I think something of the same kind must have existed in the time of Solomon. All students of history agree that women must have done the proposing in his day. How otherwise could he have landed as often as he did? He still holds the world's matrimonial record in spite of the good showing made by Lillian Russell and Kid McCoy. Now, if he had been obliged to court every girl he married he would have had to spend all his time at it, and we know that as a matter of fact he put in several hours a day attending to departmental matters and seeing his constituents. In Solomon's time the king business wasn't the clinch it is today, because if a king didn't average up pretty well the kingmakers' union took his card away from him. So Solomon must have employed a lot of clerks and contractors to create an eligible list from the different ladies who proposed. The scheme worked like a charm, for, with all the marriages he made, who ever heard of Solomon being divorced a single time? I've always wondered why the ladies don't put up a monument to Solomon. Somehow they don't seem to appreciate him. We know that the queen of Sheba proposed to him. I remember reading in the Bible about all the gifts she brought him—must have cost her as much as girls pay these days to get a duke.

"If women had been allowed to propose in the days of Henry VIII, just think what history would have been spared! Henry certainly was a wrong number matrimonially. It makes your blood run cold to recall how many wives he had—almost as many as there are Republican candidates—and how he went around killing them out of
