TWO SORTS OF DISCONTENT.

One Upbuilds. While the Other Retards Civilization and Progress.

Intelligent discontent is one of the prime factors of progress. It goads men and nations to new attainments. Charta in one century, a bill of rights in another. It is the mother of invention and the guardian of liberty It lays its finger upon an economic wrong and rights it. It fixes its eye upon a distant goal and does not stop until it reaches it, It does not follow will o' the wisps to death in the morasses of political charlatanry, nor does it waste its time in hunting for pots of gold at the foot of economic rainbows. Unintelligent discontent strikes with its eyes shut and wounds friend and foe indiscriminately. It is the terror of the true statesman, whose plans for economic progress it defeats through its very impatience, but it is the de light of the demagogue, who fattens on its fickleness. Like the dog in the fable, it is ready to drop the meat in its mouth for the shadow piece in the pool. It strives to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs in order that it may acquire a larger share of wealth that is yet to be created.

We are all rightly discontented with some of the results of corporate control of industry and of public utilities. The intelligent seek relief through publicity and regulation, conserving the individual enterprise that has wrought our civilization. The unintelligent anatch at the quack cures of public ownership and socialism.
